BROOKS can become United States Senator from Colorado.

HAMLIN cannot become Senator because he has not the state support which is given to BROOKS from nearly every county.

A vote for the BROOKS delegates is a vote to give El Paso County the Senatorship. A vote for Hamlin is a vote to give it to some other county.

We cannot fill a two-inch hole with a gimlet.

The rest of the state will not let us try it.

TWO CARS RIFLED BY LONE BANDIT

BOARDS WESTBOUND OVERLAND LIMITED IN IDAHO.

MAIL CLERKS OVERPOWERED

REGISTERED LETTERS AND EXPRESS PACKAGES TAKEN.

STAYS ON TRAIN FIVE HOURS

Robber Takes Outgoing Sacks and Puts Off Pouches at All Regular Stops. — Treated Prisoners With Much Consideration. Amount Undetermined.

SPOKANE, Wash., March 15.—A lone bandit boarded the mail car on the westbound Oriental Limited, the fast transcontinental train of the Great Northern railway, at Bonners Ferry, Idaho, before daylight today, bound the two mail clerks and robbed the mail and express cars. The robbery was not discovered until the train reached Spokane at 9:20 this morning, more than five hours after the bandit boarded the train.

The train carried the through transcontinental mail, and much of it was registered. The amount stolen will not be known until the registered mail has been checked up by the postal authorities.

When the train arrived here at 9:20 this morning the mail car was closed. Employes at the station opened the car and found one of the mail clerks lying bound on the mail sacks. The other clerk was locked in a closet.

Bandit Boards Car.

As soon as the men were released they said that a bandit boarded the car at Bonners Ferry, a division point about 100 miles east of Spokane, where the train arrived at 4:30 a. m. The clerks said the bandit held them up, bound them and went through the registered mail. He then said he would work the regular mail and proceeded to do so.

At all regular stops he threw off the mail and took the outgoing sacks, though at some of the smaller places where the train does not stop he did not throw off the mail. He stayed on the train for nearly five hours, jumping off at the Oregon Railroad and Navigation junction, 20 miles east of Spokane.

He did not put off the locked pouch at Newport, Washington and did not exchange mails at Priest River, Idaho.

Mail Badly Mixed.

As soon as the robbery was discovered the postal authorities here, and also the local police, were notified, and the work of checking up the mail began, the train being held here 30 minutes for that purpose. It was found that all the mail had been badly mixed.

The robber is described as being six feet tall. He wore a red sweater and overalls and had a three or four days' growth of beard.

Bandit Was Obliging.

Mail Clerk Benjamin Spinner and Adam W. Nystul, who were held at the mercy of the robber, tell a remarkable story of their experience. Locked in the small closet, barely two feet square, the latter almost fainted from suffocation after the train had pulled into Sand Point, 51 miles west of Bonners Ferry, and, rapping on the door, pleaded with the robber to allow him some fresh air. The bandit responded willingly, and leaving the door ajar about an inch, secured it with a piece of rope. Twice later on the way into Spokane the robber entered the car and, after the mail sack had been taken from the door of the closet to insure easy access, was finding it difficult to cut open the sacks, when, suddenly, footsteps were heard approaching the car. The bandit hid behind the door, cutting the pouches as he waited, the robber coolly informed the clerks that he made every

BROOKS SIGNAL FOR BEST BILL

S. H. COWAN SENDS TELEGRAM PROVING GAZETTE'S CLAIM.

REPORTS OF ENEMIES FALSE

ATTITUDE OF EX-CONGRESSMAN AGAIN COMMENDED.

BACA COUNTY WAS PLEASED

Resurvey Secured by Colorado Springs Man Great Benefit to People Concerned—Canon City Residents Indorse Royal Gorge Park Legislation.

The Gazette published yesterday a letter from S. H. Cowan on the meat inspection bill, written at the time the bill passed Congress. The following telegram from Mr. Cowan, received yesterday, is of interest as showing the reliability of the information which The Gazette is furnishing its readers as to Mr. Brooks' record:

Fort Worth, Tex., March 15.

Hon. Franklin E. Brooks:

Answering your telegram as to your position on the meat inspection bill, I state that your position was emphatically for the most adequate workable inspection bill and for government paying for it, and, as committee records show, in accord with me and the live stock associations I represent. To the best of my recollection, you were in favor of the bill prepared at the committee's request in toto which became to a large extent the bill as passed. During the time I knew you on the committee you were actively for the measures which our live stock associations wanted. A flood of false reports were sent out about the attitude of members of the committee on the inspection bill.

S. H. COWAN.

Baca County Resurvey.

Mr. Brooks work in other parts of the state has received the highest commendation. With regard to his bill for the Baca county resurvey, the following shows the attitude of the people in that section:

Springfield, June 3, 1907.

Hon. Franklin E. Brooks:

I see that your bill providing for a resurvey of South half of Baca county has passed both houses of Congress. In behalf of the people of Baca county I wish to thank you for your efforts in our behalf. I assure you that your work is appreciated by the people of this county regardless of political affiliations. I also wish to congratulate you upon your success in getting the measure passed.

Very respectfully yours,

GEORGE ERVIN KONKEL.

The Royal Gorge Park.

Mr. Brooks secured the passage of the bill looking a park of the Royal Gorge near Canon City. How this bill was regarded by the people in that locality is shown by the following:

Canon City, March 9, 1908.

Hon. E. E. Brooks, M. C., Washington:

As a member of this community I wish to thank you for the efforts you have made and the success you have had in getting a park at the Royal Gorge. I wish to assure you that your efforts are highly appreciated by the entire business community and we would be greatly pleased if you would succeed in the passage.

Yours respectfully,

C. HENRY HUTTON.

Canon City, March 9, 1908.

Hon. Franklin E. Brooks, M. C., Washington:

At a purely attended meeting of the Canon City Mercants Association on the 9th instant, all the business and professional men of the town were present. A resolution was unanimously adopted expressing your efforts in getting the bill for establishing a park in the canyon of the Royal Gorge in Canon City, and it was unanimously expressed the hearty appreciation of

BARKWELL AGAIN LINKED TO FEHRINGER CASE.

HAD LONG CRIMINAL RECORD

Served Time in Wisconsin for Highway Robbery Three Years Ago. Scofield Believes in Wife's Innocence, Discrediting the Story of Yellows.

Following are the latest developments in the Scofield-Barkwell case: Sam Barkwell, alias Sam Allen, alias John McDonald, whom Deputy Sheriff John Scofield killed in a revolver duel Friday afternoon, was a man with a long criminal record, one of the tricks he turned being that of holding up and robbing a prominent citizen of Hudson, Wis., on December 26, 1904, for which he served a term in jail.

Methods of John McDonald in the Wisconsin robbery almost identical with those of the man who held up and shot Otto Fehringer on February 19 on a country road three miles north of Colorado Springs.

Does Not Believe Story.

Scofield declares that he believes his wife innocent of the charge made in Denver papers to the effect that Mrs. Scofield and Barkwell had been on intimate terms and that he will maintain his attitude until he "hears her own story from her own lips."

Scofield says that it was he who gave the kodak group picture of his wife and two children, which was found in Barkwell's trunk and of which the Denver papers attempted to make a sensation, to the man when he released him from jail a year ago.

C. C. Dietz of 115 South Wahsatch, engine house, who served coming to Colorado Springs about a year ago, was a deputy sheriff at Hudson, Wis., yesterday went to the morgue and identified Barkwell, known to him as John McDonald, as the man who

FIRE CAUSES A PANIC

WHOLESALE LOSS OF LIFE IS NARROWLY AVERTED.

Would-Be Incendiaries Kindle Blaze in Basement of New Barnard Block, Denver.—No Fatalities.

DENVER, March 15.—Panic caused by fire early this morning in the new Barnard block, located at the corner of West Tenth avenue and Sherman street, came near causing the loss of many lives. The fire was discovered by the night watchman at about 2:30 o'clock in the morning in the basement of the building, which is a four story structure, and was quickly extinguished by the employes of the building and the tenants, who had been awakened by the cry of "fire." The fire had been started in three places, in the hope that it would be thought the work of incendiaries, and thus divert the attention of many of the tenants, who, in the hope of saving their goods, had begun to carry out their effects. The fire was started in the basement of the building, in the rear of the elevator shaft, in the cellar of the building, and in the third story.

ORCHARD READY TO die

SENTENCE TO BE PRONOUNCED NEXT WEDNESDAY.

Self-Confessed Murderer Declares He Understands Fully What Must Be Consequence.

BOISE, Idaho, March 15. — On the morning of his forty-second birthday next Wednesday in the district court in a remote county, Harry Orchard, self-confessed murderer of former Governor Steunenberg, who was killed by a bomb at the gate of his home in Caldwell on the evening of December 30, 1905, will hear Judge Wood pronounce upon him the sentence imposed upon him. Harry Orchard, in his own vindication against the urgent pleadings of his attorneys and others, refused, when arraigned March 9, to enter his previous plea of not guilty, stand. He also refused to plead a lesser degree of murder than that charged.

He said: "I am guilty and am ready to take the consequence. I have told the truth of conspiracy, fully, what must be the consequence."

Among some expressions are made that they believe Orchard has been promised immunity of some sort. This is denied by those in authority and by Orchard himself. Those who have been his class communications with Orchard, prison officials and others who have administered spiritual comfort to the man express the opinion that after being sentenced, some effort will be made to commute his sentence or pardon him, for that Orchard will refuse to accept it.

It is the general belief that Orchard expects to die and that he wishes to receive the extreme penalty for his crimes. The man seems to be in good spirits. Due to his confessions for publication. He is very quiet and spends much time with his books, the Bible and works of a religious nature. That he earnestly wishes his confession to be believed is known, and it is thought that he believes his own punishment in full for the crime he committed will tend to prove the truth of his confession.

SPORTS WORK CLEVER TRICK

Secure $37,000 From Wealthy Lumbermen Through Fake Wrestling Bout at New Orleans.

NEW ORLEANS, March 15.—J. E. Kavanaugh, a wealthy lumberman of Davenport, Iowa, reported to the police here today that he had been fleeced out of $37,500 by a party of men in New Orleans who posed as representatives of prominent local clubs. Mr. Kavanaugh said he was recently approached in the middle west by a man who told him that there was a crowd of wealthy men in New Orleans who were willing to risk all they had on a wrestler here, but that he knew a man named Marsh from Seattle who could throw the New Orleans wrestler and that an opportunity was presented to make a lot of money.

Kavanaugh came to New Orleans and says he met by appointment several well-groomed men, who said they had a wrestler named Gorman who could beat the world. A match was arranged and Kavanaugh bet $37,500 on Marsh. The match was held in secret. Marsh won the first fall, but when the men went to the mat a second time Marsh suddenly bled profusely from the nose and mouth. A man who said he was a doctor declared Marsh was dying. Mr. Kavanaugh was advised that if he did not want to go to jail he had better get out of the way and he went to Memphis, Tenn., temporarily.

JOHNSON FAVORED IN EAST

Minnesota Governor Would Make Stronger Run in New York Than Bryan, W. J. Conners Says.

BUFFALO, March 15.—William J. Conners, chairman of the Democratic state committee, spent several hours in the lobby of the Iroquois hotel yesterday talking to Democratic leaders of Erie county.

Intimated that headquarters for Governor Johnson of Minnesota would be opened in New York, Mr. Conners said: "I think considerable strength for Governor Johnson in the east. I am of the opinion that either Johnson or Harmon would make a stronger run in New York state than Mr. Bryan.

"It is almost certain that New York state's delegation will go to the Denver convention without instructions. They will vote under the unit rule. But whatever goes, the nomination of New York will go the Bryan way. There will be no battle."

IMMIGRATION DROPPING OFF

Alien Arrivals Still at Low Ebb. Many Foreigners, However, Are Leaving.

NEW YORK, March 15.—Immigration statistics compiled by steamship companies and just made public, show that the tide of alien arrivals in this country still remains at low ebb, while the return of foreigners to Europe continues in unusual numbers. The figures disclose that for every 50 immigrants arriving in the United States, 147 of the foreign labor element leave.

Steamship figures show that immigration is practically at a standstill, said Gustave H. Schwab, general manager of the North German Lloyd line. During the present year but 44,711 immigrants have been landed, while during the same period in 1907 figures show that 159,062 had landed in the United States.

During the two months and 13 days of this year, 132,740 of the foreign labor element have left the United States for their homes abroad. During the same period in 1907, the number of outgoing was but 43,642.

TOSSED ON TO BULL'S HORNS

Friends of Bernardino Hernandez Seek Awful Revenge.

EL PASO, Texas, March 15.—Bernardino Hernandez was tossed upon the horns of a bull in the arena at Juarez this afternoon by two of his enemies, and was seriously gored before members of the Cundrilla rescued him. Tomas Montes and Domingo Flores, the two men who tossed Hernandez, directly upon the points of the bull's horns, have been arrested and are held in the Juarez jail. The wounded man is under the care of the Cundrilla physician and will probably recover.

The bullring was crowded with an unusually large audience when Hernandez was tossed into the air.

AUTOS COST MILLIONS

DURING 1907 50,000 PLEASURE CARS WERE MADE HERE

Industry Involves 108,000 Employes. Decided Falling Off in Number of Imported Cars.

Statistics recently compiled by the association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers show that the total value of American-made automobiles for 1907 reached the enormous sum of $165,968,572. This represents 32,302 pleasure cars manufactured during the year. Of these all but 5,600 were gasoline vehicles, the smaller number being divided between steam and electric machines. In 1904 the value of the automobile output of the United States factories was $26,045,964, and a steady increase has been noticeable for every year. In making the 32,302 automobiles turned out last year, it is estimated that 38,000 employes were engaged in the various factories, while the capital employed was more than $94,000,000.

As in many other manufacturing products, there is an indirect investment, which is closely allied to vehicle manufacture. This includes such products as tires, wire, lamps, speedometers, and drop forgings. Close estimation shows that there are 70,000 men employed in this indirect manufacture, with a total capital of $98,700,000.

100,000 Employes.

Unlike many other manufactured products, the sales end of the automobile industry is comparatively easy. At the close of the year 1907 there were 1,101 sales and garage stations, employing [illegible] with a capital of $[illegible] in buildings, real estate, fixtures, tools, and stocks of supplies and accessories, the total estimated by Wall street [illegible] total capital employed, $171,448,000; number of employes involved, 108,000.

In 1907 there was a decided falling off in the number of cars imported, and the value of these cars, there having been brought in about 1,000 less automobiles available and no more than [illegible] in value. Only 1,422 were imported, as against 1,654 in the previous year of 1906, a decrease of 232 cars. The value of the 1907 cars brought in in 1907 was $3,972,298, as against the value of $5,344,[illegible] for 1906, or a decrease in value of $1,369,141. This does not, however, include taxicabs and buses, as up to the first of January there were 231 taxicabs and ten buses and one amphibious automobile, the latter being in this country in bond.

In 1902 265 cars were imported with a total value of $3,551,996; in 1903 267 cars were imported with a value of $3,637,-508, the difference between 1902 and 1903 showing a falling off in the price of the cars, as there were two more cars in 1903 than the preceding year, with a total decrease in value of $654,482. In 1904 605 cars were brought in at a value of $2,340,000; in 1905 1,054 cars were imported at a value of $3,972,298; in 1906, the highest year of any, 1,423 cars were imported at a value of $5,300,000.

The total value of the cars for the six years is $21,152,654, add to this 15 per cent for duty and 5 per cent for freight, it gives $31,728,981 which has been paid for foreign cars by Americans since 1902, $10,576,327 of which has been for duty and freight alone.

INTERCOLLEGIATES AT PENN.

The intercollegiate championship track meet will be held at Franklin field in Philadelphia on May 30 and probably one at Cambridge. At the annual meeting of the Intercollegiate Association held recently at New York the association voted to overrule the recommendation of the executive committee in favor of Cambridge and to give the games to Pennsylvania. The vote was a close one and provoked some debate in which Columbia, Michigan, Princeton and Amherst supported the claim of Pennsylvania to the games, while Cornell upheld Harvard. The final decision was reached by a vote of 5 to 7.

In answering that old and always interesting question, "Could Jim Jeffries have beaten John L. Sullivan?" Gym Bagley names Jeffries as the greatest heavyweight in ring history. He says:

Could Jim Jeffries have beaten John L. Sullivan?

Partisans of Sullivan naturally say "No." And, of course, friends of Jeff say "Yes."

And then both spring the dope to prop up their individual opinion.

"It took Jim Corbett 21 rounds to beat Sullivan when the champion was all in and at the end of his rope, and Jeffries was whipped to a standstill by Corbett for 23 rounds, and then only won by a chance punch," says one.

"There never was a man who could budge Jeffries with a punch. Joe Choynski, and Bob Fitzsimmons, two of the hardest hitters that ever packed a mitt, belted Jeff on the jaw till they wore the tape off their knuckles and never mussed his hair," says another.

And so on.

When Sullivan lost the title to Corbett, at New Orleans, September 7, 1892, the blue ribbon was wearing his tunic. He had lived the baby life that dotes on fruits and cereals for breakfast instead of cracked ice. He had acquired the blubber roll around the midship section that anchors athletic hope. And he had grown too lazy to wear this incumbrance off by beating the road.

But while this condition helped, it wasn't the direct cause of his defeat. In the striping Corbett he was up against a lucky combination with which he was totally unfamiliar, the surprise. It was Sullivan's ignorance of London ring rules that gave Charley Mitchell a decision in France. Take him from his style and he was lost.

New Methods Won.

Corbett was pea jacket stuff never before seen in the ring. He was a dancing shadow. Sullivan might as well have tried to punch holes in a sunbeam as to find the ghostly Corbett. The youth had taught himself to avoid a blow, not block it and thereby have his arms battered and tired. Sullivan was "himself" enough to defeat trying to hit his man. That's what sent him down and out. Now, with Jeffries at Coney Island, Corbett mentally and makes a modest percent of definite for all mortals. He hit him so often that it would take a seeing picture machine to count the blows.

He didn't "beat him to death." Not to any alarming extent. Jeff was only scalped. The cuts at times dimmed his peepers, and he bled for that. And when he finally got it, it was no "chance wallop." Don't you think it would Jeff was carefully coached from his corner by Billy Delaney, who knew it was only a matter of time when the big fellow would get his right one over.

And so it happened. Corbett was slowing up by reason of his own work. He had to punch and get away, and the pace began to tell. The blacks of his knees got a bit rusty with use, and his eyes grew weary and not so keen to judge distance. It was then that the shadow took on substance and the cumbersome Jeffries recalled for it and got it.

Corbett stepped in as he had been doing and punched, and then—the getaway was a bit awkward. Jeff dropped one for the jaw and it landed. Curtains for Jim.

Had Corbett been able to keep up his work to the end of the 25th round, he would again have been champion of the world.

Fitz Made Mistake.

Fitzsimmons held Jeffries cheap the first time they met and ran into a straight left that lost him the fight.

The second time, in Frisco, Fitz was still good, and gave Jeff the only beating he ever received for eight rounds, and then—the Jeffries club, and Fitz for the count.

Just to show how much that big grizzly can take and keep his feet, this illustration will suffice. You know how Fitz could hit. You are here to that awful bunch of bones he calls a hand. Well, he dipped his bandages in plaster of paris before he went on that night. When that waster of paris set, he might as well have had a brick in either mitt.

Billy Delaney, when he examined Fitz's bandages, saw they were wet and wanted to know.

"I happened to drop the rags in a bucket of water," said Fitz.

And Delaney fell for the explanation.

For bars of eight rounds Fitz battered Jeff around the face with those terrible weights, cutting his face up till he looked like a collapsed map, but he couldn't fan the jonster.

When Jeff first came east and fought Bob Armstrong, he knew about as much of scientific fighting as a baby knows of whiskers. He looked like a big dub. No one took into consideration the terrible power of the bridge and the impossibility of hurting him.

But when he fought Corbett the second time—what a change. Said Jim to the referee that night:

"You think we clever, don't you?"

"The cleverest thing the ring ever knew," I replied.

"Well," said Jim, "I never was any clever or faster than Jeffries. I never knew a trick at the game that he doesn't know. He has learned. Anyone that thinks he is only strong and tough, has another thing coming to him."

And that's the answer. Sullivan was clever, too, in his style. And he was strong and tough. But take the only John L. at the time he met Paddy Ryan and became champion, and Jeffries when he trimmed Corbett the last time, and when you write the picture, the list name will begin with "J."

HIS LAST YEAR IN SADDLE

Jockey Walter Miller Thinks He is Entitled to a Rest.

Walter Miller, America's best jockey, says that this will be his last year in the saddle as far as the tracks in this country are concerned. "I feel that I will have earned a little rest after a hard season of this season," said Miller, the other day. "And as I am growing older it is naturally becoming more difficult to maintain my contract weight. This I can only do by depriving myself of even ordinary luxuries. I feel that I have done my share to this racing game. I can do 103 pounds now, but sometimes it is with the greatest difficulty. By next year, if I continue to grow as I have been doing lately, it will be impossible for me to make that weight. I do not expect to be a rider all my life. It is just possible that I may do a little riding in Europe later on, but that will not be for long.

Miller has made $200,000 since he first became famous as a jockey several years ago, and has laid away a good portion of this amount.

AMERICAN CHESS PLAYERS WIN

Score Victory in International Cable Match After Two Days' Stubborn Playing.

NEW YORK, March 14.—After two days of stubbornly contested play, the tenth international cable chess match ended tonight in a victory for the American players, who secured 3½ points out of a possible 10 by winning three games, drawing five, while two games are held in abeyance pending adjudication by the referee. Sir George Newn's trophy, which was held by Great Britain last year, now becomes the prize of America.

The Americans won three games in succession, namely on boards 1, 5 and 8. First to score was Wolbrecht, who, by a smart combination, encompassed his adversary's position, forcing Allies as resignation after 40 moves. Next came Schweitzer, who outplayed Englund. He won after 42 moves. The third to win the game was Lilienthal, who had nursed the advantage which he obtained in the morning until Palmer surrendered, after 40 moves.

The British scored against Ameri[illegible] in games one and four, the latter being a pawn ahead on both boards, which the Americans declined to do. Delmar, on the fourth board, held his adversary to the last, and 50 moves were made. The game will be adjudicated.

CHALLENGE AUSTRALIANS.

Americans May Send Team to Play for Davis Trophy.

A challenge has been sent by the United States Lawn Tennis association to Australia to play for the Dwight F. Davis challenge cup, which was won by the team of Australian players in England last year. It has not yet been decided to send a team to Australia to compete for the cup, but if may be found possible later to send a team to the antipodes. It was necessary to send a challenge to reach before the first of March to comply with the conditions of the cup contests. With the challenge a letter was sent abroad explaining the uncertainty as to a team competing, and declaring that the challenge was a tentative one only.

It was been suggested that England challenge for the Davis cup, and that the English team go to Australia by way of the United States and meet the English and American team, thus hope to decide the matter beyond dispute, the winners to continue to Australia for the final competition.

to the sensational stories printed in the Denver papers. There is said to be a letter in the postoffice at Colorado City addressed to Barkwell and bearing a Los Angeles postmark, but I do not know that even this is more than a rumor. At all events there is no evidence that there has ever been improper relations between Barkwell and Scofield's wife. I believe that Barkwell was connected in some way with the Fehringer mystery and that this was the cause of his alleged trouble with Mr. Scofield."

Is Favorably Known Here.

Mrs. Scofield, whose maiden name was Edna McClelland, is well and favorably known in this district, having been adopted when a little girl and reared by former Justice McClelland and wife on a ranch five miles east of Falcon. She married Mr. Scofield about seven years ago and is now about 28 years of age. To her friends and the jail officials, with whom she comes more or less in contact through her duties as matron, she is known as a woman of kindly disposition and has always shown in a marked degree a deep devotion to her husband and children. She is at present visiting her father in Los Angeles, accompanied by her children.

Body Still at Morgue.

The body of Barkwell, who died in his own insane attempt to take the life of another, is still in the morgue awaiting funeral arrangements, which are being delayed while the coroner is trying to get some trace of the dead man's relatives. Barkwell left practically no resources, and it may be that the county may have to bear the cost of the funeral. The man carried an accident insurance policy, but owing to the nature of his death it is invalid.

TARGET PRACTICE TO START TODAY

ican cruisers which were put on board the vessels in response to the demand of ordnance officers for heavier guns than the eight-inch rifles of the West Virginia class. The heavier guns and turrets added nearly a thousand tons to the weight of the Tennessee and Washington over the West Virginia and required a thinning of the main armor belt from six to five inches. The turret protection was increased, however, from six inches to 9 inches. All of these big armored cruisers are ranked with the battleships in summing up their large records, and for this reason their scores are of unusual interest at this time, when the world-girdling fleet is about to begin its target work.

System of Scoring.

There is a separate system of scoring, however, even among the battleships when it comes to classifying the work of the gunners for promotion and prize money distribution. Some of these ships, for instance, have 12-inch guns of 40 caliber, while others have the same diameter of rifle, but of 45 caliber. In naval phrase, the caliber means the length which, as it increases, permits of heavier shells and powder charges and calls for more accurate shootings. For this reason hits with a 45-caliber rifle do not call for as high an allowance of points as hits with the lower powered guns of the same class. The 12-inch rifles which are still retained on the Kentucky, Kearsarge, Alabama and Illinois, the oldest vessels of Admiral Evans' fleet, are adapted to do even more accurate work than the 12-inch rifles of the later range and type, and the points allowed for their hits are even lower. There is a strong feeling against the ordnance officers of which there is now no designed to each of the armed vessels of the navy, that the 12-inch gun will be in more general use, and they will welcome the return to the heavier rifle, with its 1,150-pound projectile as against the 850-pound weight of the 12-inch shell.

The Illinois holds the battleship target trophy, won at the spring practice last year, but in the fall work the gunners of the Maine and the Louisiana contended for honors, the latter ship, which is in the Dewey squadron, being equipped with the most modern of the 12-inch rifles. For the best record in prize firing last fall and practically all the year from 12 to 16 knots of pay per month.

"ining Survey Bill.

In the first session of the Fifty-[illegible] Congress, the very important mining survey bill was passed. This bill was introduced by Mr. Brooks in the House and was made the subject of a formal resolution by the Colorado Mine Operators association in the following language:

Whereas, The passage through Congress of House bill No. 13[illegible] has been successfully accomplished, and

Whereas, This bill is of the greatest importance to mine owners and operators throughout the country in that it places mining titles upon a sounder basis than ever before, and

Whereas, The passage of the said bill through the House of Representatives was due primarily to the very persistent and able efforts of Congressman Franklin E. Brooks:

Therefore, Be it Resolved, by the Colorado Mine Operators association at its annual meeting of May 2, 1904, That a vote of thanks be extended to the Honorable Franklin E. Brooks for the very valuable and efficient service rendered by him to this association and to the mining industry, and the secretary of the association is hereby instructed to forward to him a copy of these resolutions.

The Colorado Mine Operators Association.
By F. J. CAMPBELL, President.
W. E. PASSMORE, Secretary.

From His Home People.

Mr. Brooks' work in the same Congress elicited from the Colorado Springs Real Estate exchange the following:

The Colorado Real Estate Exchange,
Colorado Springs, June 24, 1904.

Hon. Franklin E. Brooks, City.

Dear Sir—It gives me pleasure to advise you that at a recent meeting of the members of the Colorado Springs Real Estate exchange, a motion was carried instructing the secretary to convey to you, in the name of the exchange, the approval and appreciation of its members of the faithful and commendable manner in which you have handled the various matters arising in Congress, which efforts, we feel, have resulted in great good to the state, and particularly for your valuable services rendered in securing the large appropriation for irrigation projects in the state, as well as for the federal building in this city.

Very truly yours,
The Colorado Springs Real Estate Exchange, per J. H. Flood, Secretary.

the Galveston Harbor.

In the same session he did much to secure the improvements for the harbor of Galveston at the request of numerous Colorado Springs constituents and this was commented upon as follows:

Galveston, Texas, March 25, 1904.

Hon. Franklin E. Brooks, United States Representative, Colorado Springs, Colo.

Dear Sir—[illegible] instructed by the Galveston Deep Water committee to formally express to you our sincere appreciation of the assistance you rendered to our senators and congressmen and also to our special representative in Washington in respect to the measures affecting Galveston before the last session of Congress. While we feel that our requests were meritorious, at the same time we know that without your active co-operation and encouragement we could not have hoped for the splendid success that crowned the efforts of Galveston friends. Indeed, the measure of this port's obligations to the representatives of Colorado at Washington can hardly be overestimated. Their generous and effective aid has been felt ever since the deep water at Galveston was first inaugurated. I assure you that the people of Galveston feel deeply grateful for all of these things, and our personal obligation to you in the premises is not lessened by the fact that not only Texas but the whole southwest reaps the benefit of every dollar spent in the protection and improvement of this its chief port. We hope that by our own endeavors it has in part at least been demonstrated we are not wholly unworthy of the trust reposed in us.

Again reassuring you of our appreciation of your help in these matters, we beg to indulge the hope that at some future time circumstances may permit us to be of some service to you or your people, if it is necessary to say with avidity such an opportunity would be grasped by all of us and our friends.

Very respectfully,
R. WAVERLY SMITH,
Chairman.

In the Galveston Daily News of May 3, 1904, Ex-Congressman Gussian, in making a report on the appropriations which had been made for the benefit of that city, on occasion to say in reference to Mr. Brooks:

"Too much cannot be said of the energetic, able and patient work of representatives Bishop and Brooks. Both of these gentlemen, though new members in Congress, readily adapted themselves to the situation and Mr. Brooks particularly obtained for his state, Congress, I will venture to say more than any new member in Congress did for his state."

Horse Breeding.

Mr. Brooks' work in securing the horse breeding establishment at Fort Collins is shown from the New York Evening Post the following comment:

The Evening Post of New York, under date of May 4, 1904, has the following to say in regard to the work of Mr. Brooks in Congress:

[illegible]

Very few men in their first term have done what he has accomplished in doing for his state and the west. There are lots of things that come up from Wyoming and the adjoining states in which he has given us valuable aid and for this reason I would like to see him re-elected.

effort to make it as comfortable as possible for his victim. While tipping open the registered sacks the pseudo inspector cut one of his fingers and many pieces of mail were blood-stained.

Pretended to Be Inspector.

St. Paul, Minn., March 15.—A special to the Pioneer Press from Spokane, Wash., says that the bandit who boarded the mail car of the Oriental Limited at Bonners Ferry, Idaho, early this morning secured admittance under the guise of postoffice inspector, giving the name of C. W. Bennett. John Nystum, one of the postal clerks, was on duty at that hour, as was the other clerk, Benjamin Stumpf, who was asleep under a table.

"There are [illegible] bandit inquired. "Tell them to be pleasant, please, look."

Nystum complied with the request and when he turned to inform the pretended inspector that there was none he looked into the muzzle of a revolver. After warning Nystum not to make an outcry, the bandit directed him to get into the closet and proceeded to rifle the mails.

Clerk Awakens.

In about four hours Stumpf, who had awakened when the bandit first entered the car and had gone to sleep again, was informed by Nystum that an inspector was aboard, had again awakened. Thinking it strange that he had not been called, Stumpf looked toward the mail table and saw the stranger sorting letters. As the clerk was crawling from beneath the table under which he had slept, the bandit drew a revolver and told him to be still. He then threw a handkerchief over the clerk's head, bound his hands behind him and seated him in the far end of the car. Three times during the run to Spokane the bandit asked the clerk who was located in the small closet, if he were suffering from suffocation, and being answered in the affirmative he thrice opened the door and let the imprisoned man get some fresh air.

NO LOVE FOR U. S.

Neither does the continent of Europe like Japan, and for similar reason. Her recently achieved naval and military prestige [illegible] have brought Japan to the front in the family of nations as a power to be reckoned with within the world politics. It calls a halt to further acquisition in the east and then now is likely to mark a recession in European influence in Asia. Concomitant therewith European commerce is suffering a serious check and is bound in future, in view of the wonderful commercial adaptability and activity of the Japanese, to encounter a competition heretofore unknown. The "yellow peril," that loomed large in the earlier stages of the Russo-Japanese war, still stalks the continent of Europe, although it is no longer politic to claim the same.

Would Like to See War.

It follows from this condition of affairs that nothing would be contemplated with greater complacency by the continental powers than a war between the United States and Japan. A taxing of the strength and a wasting of the resources of these two powers, not involving themselves, would stand to restore their relative power and prestige in the council of nations.

This explains the repeated rumors from Paris, Berlin and St. Petersburg of impending difficulties between the United States and Japan; the wish is father to the thought and the continued prediction of trouble is made in the hope of inciting the same. They expected some disaster to befall our fleet in its Pacific cruise. They consider Admiral Evans as something of a swashbuckler and they regard the President as impulsive, and they seem to have really persuaded themselves that disaster or complications must ensue. The fleet proceeded on its journey not only without mishap, but in a manner reconstructing its antagonists. The reception it received has proved the wisdom of the cruise, and no one can fail to read from it the closer ties between the two Americas, which must be of a great commercial and political advantage in the future. Our European censors are proportionately disappointed.

England Our Only Friend.

It was never more apparent than now that the only European friend we have is England. England is the only European power that would not welcome a condition of affairs that might bring us into disaster or defeat. England's interests would be served thereby, and anything that would impair our prestige would be alien to her policy.

SEASON OF HIGH FINANCE IN JAPAN

[illegible] somewhat signing to that new work. Consideration here was adopted with great success. It is doubtful, however, if anything more definite along these lines will be made public until after the coming general elections.

The influence that has unmistakably prompted Japan to at least take into consideration this question of the future control of the railroads is stated to be the fact that, in view of the financial necessities of the coming 12 months, financiers believed that a foreign loan was inevitable and that the foreign markets were sounded.

Foreign Money Hard to Get.

It then developed that Europe and America regarded the naval and military policies of Japan, which it has thought indicated an expectation of trouble as fatal to Japan's credit as a borrower to large amounts in the foreign field. In other words, Japan has been told that money will not be forthcoming for building up an army and navy beyond such standard as is reasonable to expect Japan to maintain, and that the financial world would prefer to see Japan really and in earnest developing her resources for the betterment of her people, than taxing those people for an army and navy, which rightly or wrongly, are said to be destined for ugly [illegible] sooner or later.

The reply of the Japanese government to this seems to have been that the financial program of the future contemplated a very large reduction of expenditures on the army and navy, but those who [illegible] in a position to lend money apparently rejoined that they would prefer a guarantee as to the expenditures of the money loaned, and added that, in common with so many people in Japan, they thought the nationalization of the railroads quite as great a mistake as too rapid and ambitious plans for army and navy.

Syndicate May Take Hold.

The outlined proposition, therefore, to which the government of Japan has lent an ear and which it is now considering, is that a syndicate of European financiers will assist Japan in working out the financial problem of the future, provided the Japanese government is content that this financial relief shall be applied to the betterment of her railroad system and for internal development.

The project is large, but there is an indication that a syndicate is serious in making the proposition and believes that only under such a plan can foreign capital to the extent of two or three hundred million yen be induced to regard favorably the investment of money in Japanese securities.

UNDER STOLEN COLORS

arch enemy of Roosevelt is Clarence Hamlin's uncle. The war between Roosevelt and Harriman is a matter of common knowledge throughout the country, and none would be better pleased than Harriman to see Nephew Clarence Hamlin seated in the Senate to assist Uncle Senator Clarence Clark of Wyoming in his fight against the administration and its policies.

How They Figure It.

Senator Clark of Wyoming is one of the men whom Harriman can always count upon in his fight against Roosevelt and naturally he would like his nephew with him so that his vote would be doubled. Senator Clark no doubt knows by experience what little ability it requires to obtain and hold a seat in the Senate, provided the financial interests are behind him and it is the most natural thing in the world that he should have set the senatorial bee to buzzing in the head of his Colorado Springs nephew on the principle that the interests that made uncle a senator can make "nephew" a senator likewise. In this Mr. Hamlin is carrying out his program and doing his utmost to comply with the wishes of his uncle, the anti-administration senator and his friend Harriman.

Under such influences it needs no argument to show what Hamlin would do if the Roosevelt policies if he had a chance in the Senate or elsewhere.

SAILORS ROYALLY ENTERTAINED

Bull Fights, Ball Games and Other Sports at Panama for Members of Torpedo Flotilla.

PANAMA, March 15.—Lieut. H. L. Cole, commander of the American torpedo flotilla, and the officers and men were delighted with their reception here. All the men of the flotilla are proud of the record which the little boats have made. With the exception of a few minor repairs, the destroyers are practically in the same condition as when they left the United States.

Last evening the officers of the fleet attended a dance at the Tivoli club, where they met many of the prominent people of the city and the canal zone. There was a baseball game today between a nine from the destroyer Stewart and a local team, and later even man who could be spared from the boats went to see a grand bull fight in which both male and female bull fighters took part.

Self-Confessed Murderer Declares He Understands Fully What Must Be Consequence.

BOISE, Idaho, March 15.—On the morning of his forty-second birthday, next Wednesday, in the district court of Canyon county, Harry Orchard, the self-confessed murderer of former Governor Steunenberg, who was killed by the explosion of a bomb at the gate to his residence in Caldwell on the evening of December 30, 1905, will face Judge Wood, prepared to hear the death sentence pronounced out to him. Harry Orchard of his own volition, in spite of the urgent pleadings of his attorneys and others, refused, when arraigned March 10, to let his previous plea of "not guilty" stand. He also refused to plead a lesser degree of murder than first degree.

He said: "I am guilty and are ready to take the punishment. I have told the truth. I understand fully what must be the consequence."

Among some expressions are made that they believe Orchard has been guaranteed immunity of some sort. This is denied by those in authority and by Orchard himself. Those who have been in close communication with Orchard, prison authorities and others who have administered spiritual comfort to the man express the opinion that after being sentenced, some effort will be made to commute his sentence or pardon him, for that Orchard will refuse to accept it.

It is the general belief that Orchard expects to be hanged, that he wishes to receive the extreme penalty for his crimes. He has refused to be interviewed or to write one line for publication. He is very quiet and spends much time with his books, the Bible and works of a religious nature. That he earnestly wishes his confession to be believed is known, and it is thought that he believes his own punishment in full for the crime he committed will tend to prove the truth of his confession.

Secure $37,000 From Wealthy Lumbermen Through Fake Wrestling Bout at New Orleans.

NEW ORLEANS, March 15.—J. E. Kavanaugh, a wealthy lumberman of Davenport, Iowa, reported to the police here today that he had been fleeced out of $37,500 by a party of men in New Orleans who posed as representatives of prominent local clubs. Mr. Kavanaugh said he was recently approached in the middle west by a man who told him that there was a crowd of wealthy men in New Orleans who were willing to risk all they had on a wrestler here, but that he knew a man named Marsh from Seattle who could throw the New Orleans wrestler and that an opportunity was presented to make a lot of money.

Kavanaugh came to New Orleans and says he met by appointment several well-groomed men, who said they had a wrestler named Gorman who could beat the world. A match was arranged and Kavanaugh bet $37,500 on Marsh. The match was held in secret. Marsh won the first fall, but when the men went to the mat a second time Marsh suddenly bled profusely from the nose and mouth. A man who said he was a doctor declared Marsh was dying. Mr. Kavanaugh was advised that if he did not want to go to jail he had better get out of the way and he went to Memphis, Tenn., temporarily.

JOHNSON FAVORED IN EAST

Minnesota Governor Would Make Stronger Run in New York Than Bryan, W. J. Conners Says.

BUFFALO, March 15.—William J. Conners, chairman of the Democratic state committee, spent several hours in the lobby of the Iroquois hotel yesterday, talking to Democratic leaders of Erie county.

Informed that headquarters for Governor Johnson of Minnesota would be opened in New York, Mr. Conners said: "I found considerable sentiment for Governor Johnson in the east. I am of the opinion that either Johnson or Harmon would make a stronger run in New York state than Mr. Bryan.

"It is almost certain that New York state's delegation will go to the Denver convention without instructions. They will be still vote under the unit rule. But whoever gets the nomination, New York will give the convention's candidate hearty support. There will be no bolters."

IMMIGRATION DROPPING OFF

Alien Arrivals Still at Low Ebb. Many Foreigners, However, Are Leaving.

NEW YORK, March 15.—Immigration statistics compiled by steamship companies and just made public, show that the tide of alien arrivals in this country still remains at low ebb, while the return of foreigners to Europe continues in unusual numbers. The figures disclose that for every 50 immigrants arriving in the United States, 147 of the foreign labor element leave.

Steamship figures show that immigration is practically at a standstill, said Gustave H. Schwab, general manager of the North German Lloyd line. During the present year but 44,712 immigrants have been landed, while during the same period in 1907 figures show that 139,052 had landed in the United States.

During the two months and 13 days of this year, 132,740 of the foreign labor element have left the United States for their homes abroad. During the same period in 1907, the number of outgoing was but 43,642.

TOSSED ON TO BULL'S HORNS

Friends of Bernardino Hernandez Seek Awful Revenge.

EL PASO, Texas, March 15.—Bernardino Hernandez was tossed upon the horns of a bull in the arena at Juarez this afternoon by two of his enemies, and was seriously gored before members of the Cuadrilla rescued him.

Tomase Montes and Domingo Flores, the two men who tossed Hernandez directly upon the points of the bull's horns, have been arrested and are held in the Juarez jail. The wounded man is under the care of the arena physician and will probably recover.

The bull ring was crowded with an unusually large audience, which became very excited when Hernandez was thrown into the ring.

Man Throws Glass at Barkeeper, Is Shot in Return.

TRINIDAD, Colo., March 15.—Becomingly incensed because there was too much foam on a glass of beer served him, Edward James, a mine clerk, threw the glass and contents at James Bisslick, bartender in a saloon at Bowen, a small coal camp four miles north of here, late last night, whereupon Bisslick shot James in the breast, near the heart. Death resulted yesterday. Bisslick surrendered to the authorities and is confined in the county jail. Bisslick is a Slav and was formerly a miner.

AUTOS COST MILLIONS

DURING 1907 50,000 PLEASURE CARS WERE MADE HERE

Industry Involves 108,000 Employes. Decided Falling Off in Number of Imported Cars.

Statistics recently compiled by the association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers show that the total value of American-made automobiles for 1907 reached the enormous sum of $105,862,572. This represents 52,302 pleasure cars manufactured during the year. Of these, all but 5,600 were gasoline vehicles, the smaller number being divided between steam and electric machines. In 1904 the value of the automobile output of the United States factories was $26,645,064, and a steady increase has been noticeable for every year [illegible] turned out last year it is estimated that 87,000 employes were engaged in the various factories, while the capital employed was more than $84,000,000.

As in many other manufacturing products, there is an indirect investment, which is closely allied to vehicle manufacture. This includes such products as tires, rims, lamps, speedometers, and drop forgings. Close estimation shows that there are 25,000 men employed in this indirect manufacture, with a total capital of $38,700,000.

100,000 Employes.

Unlike many other manufactured products, the sales end of the automobile industry is correspondingly expensive. At the close of the year 1907 there were 2,131 sales and garage establishments, employing 25,000 persons and a capital of $61,000,000, using properties, real estate, leaseholds, bond and interest on money borrowed. Not including the manufacturing and motor cycles or the sale of supplies and accessories, the total estimation of value of product sold, $103,663,572; total capital employed, $172,445,787; number of employes involved, 108,000.

In 1907 there was a decided falling off in the number of cars imported and the value of these cars, there having been brought in about 1,017 new cars which were dutiable and 2,600 used and second-hand cars on which no duty was paid, making a total number of imported cars of 3,600, as against 3,453 for 1906, or a decrease of 145 cars. The value of the 1,017 cars brought in in 1907 was $2,900,859, an increase in the value of $5,868,000 for 1906, or a decrease in value of $2,969,141. This does not, however, include taxicabs and buses, as up to the first of January there were 231 taxicabs and ten buses and one amphibious automobile, the latter being in this country in bond.

In 1902 245 cars were imported with a total value of $3,581,900; in 1903 267 cars came in, at a value of $3,[illegible] 508, the difference between 1902 and 1903 showing a falling off in the price of the cars, as there were two more cars in 1903 than the preceding year, with a total decrease in value of $654,432. In 1904 605 cars were brought in at a value of $2,240,600; in 1905 1,054 cars were imported at a value of $3,972,298; in 1906, the highest year of any, 1,482 cars were imported at a value of $5,500,000.

The total value of the cars for the six years is $21,152,654; add to this 45 per cent for duty and 5 per cent for freight, it gives $31,728,981 which has been paid for foreign cars by Americans since 1902. $10,576,327 of which has been for duty and freight alone.

INTERCOLLEGIATES AT PENN.

The intercollegiate championship track and field meet will be held at Franklin field in Philadelphia on May 29 and 30 next, and not at Cambridge. At the annual meeting of the Intercollegiate Association, held recently at New York, the association voted to overrule the recommendation of the executive committee in favor of Cambridge and to give the games to Pennsylvania. The vote was a close one and provoked some debate in which Columbia, Michigan, Princeton and Amherst supported the claim of Pennsylvania to the games, while Cornell upheld Harvard. The final decision was reached by a vote of 5 to 7.

JEFF WORLD'S GREATEST

IS SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHER CHAMPIONS OF RING.

Sullivan Lacked Cleverness and Adaptability Necessary to Really Wonderful Fighter.

In answering that old and always interesting question, "Could Jim Jeffries have beaten John L. Sullivan," Gym Bagley names Jeffries as the greatest heavyweight in ring history. He says:

Could Jim Jeffries have beaten John L. Sullivan?

Partisans of Sullivan naturally say "No." And, of course, friends of Jeff say "Yes."

And then both spring the dope to prop up their individual opinion.

"It took Jim Corbett 21 rounds to beat Sullivan when the champion was all in and at the end of his rope, and Jeffries was whipped to a standstill by Corbett for 23 rounds, and then only won by a chance punch," says one.

"There never was a man who could budge Jeffries with a punch. Joe Choynski and Bob Fitzsimmons, two of the hardest hitters that ever packed a mitt, belted Jeff on the jaw till they wore the face off their knuckles and never mussed his hair," says another.

And so on.

When Sullivan lost the title to Corbett, at New Orleans, September 7, 1892, the big fellow was nearing the finish. He hadn't lived the hard life that does on fruits and cereals for breakfast instead of cracked ice. He had acquired the blubber roll around his midship section that anchors athletic hope. And he had grown too lazy to work this incumbrance off by beating the road.

But while this condition helped, it wasn't the direct cause of his defeat. In the stripling Corbett, he was up against a new game, one with which he was totally unfamiliar, the surprise. It was Sullivan's ignorance of London ring rules that gave Charley Mitchell a draw in France. Take him from his style and he was lost.

New Methods Won.

Corbett was new stuff—stuff never before seen in the ring. He was a dancing shadow. Sullivan might as well have tried to punch holes in a sunbeam as to find the ghostly Corbett. The youth had taught himself to avoid a throw, no block it and thereby have his arms hoisted and tired. Sullivan wore himself down to defeat trying to chop his man. That's what beat him. Corbett did not knock him out.

Now, with Jeffries at Coney Island, Corbett certainly did make a foolish person of Jeffries for 23 rounds. He hit him so often that it would take a moving picture machine to count the blows.

He didn't "beat him to death." Not to any alarming extent. Jeff was only waiting. The rain of blows didn't bother him. All he wanted was just one punch, and he laid for that. And when he finally got it, it was no "chance wallop." Don't you think it was. Jeff was carefully coached from his corner by Billy Delaney, who knew it was only a matter of time when the big fellow would get his right one over.

And so it happened. Corbett was slowing up by reason of his own work. He had to punch and get away, and the pace began to tell. The hinges of his knees got a bit rusty with use, and his eyes grew weary and not so keen to judge distance. It was then that the shadow took on substance and the cumbersome Jeffries rocked for it and got it.

Corbett stepped in as he had been doing and punched, and then—the getaway was a bit awkward. Jeff dropped one for the jaw and it landed. Curtains for Jim.

Had Corbett been able to keep up his work to the end of the 25th round, he would again have been champion of the world.

Fitz Made Mistake.

Fitzsimmons held Jeffries cheap the first time they met and ran into a straight left that lost him the fight.

The second time, in Frisco, Fitz was still good, and gave Jeff the only beating he ever received for eight rounds, and then—the Jeffries club, and Fitz for the count.

Just to show how much that big grizzly can take and keep his feet, this illustration will suffice. You know how Fitz could hit. You are here to that awful bunch of bones he calls a hand. Well, he dipped his bandages in plaster of paris before he went on that night. When that plaster of paris set, he might as well have had a brick in either mitt.

Billy Delaney, when he examined Fitz's bandages, saw they were wet and wanted to know.

"I happened to drop the rags in a bucket of water," said Fitz.

And Delaney fell for the explanation.

For part of eight rounds Fitz hammered Jeff around the jaw with these terrible weights, cutting his face up till it looked like a railroad map, but he couldn't jar the monster.

When Jeff first came east and fought Bob Armstrong, he knew about as much of scientific fighting as a baby knows of whiskers. He looked like a big dub. No one took into consideration the terrible power of the brute and the impossibility of hurting him.

But when he fought Corbett the second time—what a change. Said Jim to me after that fight:

"You think me clever, don't you?"

"The cleverest thing the ring ever knew," I replied.

"Well," said Jim, "I don't say any cleverer or faster than Jeffries. I never knew a trick of the game that he doesn't know. He has learned. Anyone that thinks he is only strong and tough, has another think coming to him."

And that's the answer. Sullivan was clever, too, at his style. And he was strong and tough. But take the only John L. at the time he beat Paddy Ryan and became the champion, and Jeffries when he trimmed Corbett the last time, and when you write the ticket the last name will begin with "J."

HIS LAST YEAR IN SADDLE

Jockey Walter Miller Thinks He is Entitled to a Rest.

Walter Miller, America's best jockey, says that this will be his last year in the saddle as far as the tracks in this country are concerned. "I feel that I will have earned a little rest and enjoyment after this season," said Miller the other day, "and as I am growing older it naturally becomes more difficult to maintain my contract weight. This I can only do by depriving myself of even ordinary luxuries. I feel that I have done my share in the racing game. I can do 108 pounds now, but sometimes it is with the greatest difficulty. By next year, if I continue to grow as I have been doing lately, it will be impossible for me to make that weight. I do not expect to be a rider all my life. It is just possible that I may do a little riding in Europe later on, but that will not be for long."

Miller has made $200,000 since he first became famous as a jockey several years ago, and has laid away a good portion of this amount.

AMERICAN CHESS PLAYERS WIN

Score Victory in International Cable Match After Two Days' Stubborn Playing.

NEW YORK, March 15.—After two days of stubbornly contested play, the tenth international cable chess match ended tonight in a victory for the American players, who secured 3½ points out of a possible 10 by winning three games, drawing five, while two games are held in abeyance pending adjudication by the referee. Sir George Newn's trophy, which was held by Great Britain last year, now becomes the prize of America.

The Americans won three games in succession, namely on boards 7, 8 and 9. First to score was Wolbrecht, who by a smart combination encompassed his adversary's position, forcing Mieses' resignation after 42 moves. Next came Schweitzer, who outplayed Englund. He won after 42 moves. The third to win his game was Lilienthal, who had nursed the advantage which he obtained in the morning until Palmer surrendered, after 41 moves.

The Britishers demanded that America should give up games one and four, they being a pawn ahead on both boards, which the Americans declined to do. Delmar, on the fourth board, held his adversary to the last, and 60 moves were made. The game will be adjudicated.

CHALLENGE AUSTRALIANS.

Americans May Send Team to Play for Davis Trophy.

A challenge has been sent by the United States Lawn Tennis association to Australia to play for the Dwight F. Davis challenge cup, which was won by the team of Australian players in England last year. It has not yet been decided to send a team to Australia to compete for the cup, but it may be found possible later to send a team to the antipodes. It was necessary that a challenge be sent before the first of March to comply with the conditions of the cup contests. With the challenge a letter was sent abroad explaining the uncertainty as to a team competing, and declaring that the challenge was a technical one to qualify.

It has been suggested that England and America challenge for the Davis cup, and that the English team go to Australia by way of the United States, and that the English and American teams play here to decide the preliminary match, the winners to continue to Australia for the final competition.

MYSTERY DEEPEN

held up and robbed a prominent citizen of that place on December 26, 1904, having followed him from town into the country. McDonald was arrested a few days later and served a term of a few months in jail for the offense. Diets was then jailed and feels certain that Barkwell was the man whom he had in custody at that time.

Linked With Fehringer Case.

Basing his theory on the similarity of the two cases, he is strongly inclined to the belief that Barkwell, alias McDonald, is the man who killed Otto Fehringer.

Although some of the officers here still discredit the theory that Barkwell held up Fehringer, the story told by Diets again casts suspicion in that direction. Undersheriff George Dayton said yesterday that in his opinion Barkwell at least had something to do with the robbery of the druggist. In order to satisfy himself on this point and, if possible to be of assistance to the local officers, Diets says he intends to write to the present sheriff at Hudson, Wis., and obtain from the records a full description of McDonald and all of the details connected with the robbery there.

McDonald Seen Here.

Diets claims that McDonald at the time of his arrest in Wisconsin was known to have a bad record dating back many years before the Hudson affair. He also says that soon after coming to this city he met McDonald on South Tejon street one day. The men recognized each other at a glance and stopped for a few minutes' conversation, during which McDonald asked Diets if he had not formerly been a deputy sheriff at Hudson, Wis. Receiving an affirmative reply, the man seemed unwilling to talk at length, evading the question asked by Diets as to what he was doing in Colorado Springs. A passer happened to blow in, he remarked and then went on his way. Diets then went to a police officer and told him to keep an eye on McDonald for he was a desperate character. He did not see the man again after that until he went to the morgue yesterday. He is certain that Barkwell and McDonald were one and the same man.

Scofield Loyal to Wife.

"I would not credit any stories against my wife's honor and will not believe the insinuations made in the Denver yellow papers, unless she tells me with her own lips that they are founded on facts," said Deputy Scofield yesterday in speaking of the tragedy on Friday, in connection with which the Denver papers strongly intimated that the reason for the attempt on his life was the relations between Barkwell and Mrs. Scofield. "I have not the slightest suspicion against her and feel that there is no ground for any. She has always been a good wife to me."

To the many friends of John Scofield, the loyalty he is displaying to his wife does not come as a surprise. He has always shown the utmost devotion to his family and it is to his credit that his loyalty remains unshaken pending an investigation of the rumors.

How the Story Started.

The story first emanated from very questionable sources of gossip in Colorado City, where statements had been made on the street that Mrs. Scofield had been seen repeatedly in company with Barkwell. This was followed up by rumors of letters from Mrs. Scofield having been found in the dead man's trunk by the officers who searched his room. A sensation was also made of the fact that in Barkwell's trunk a group picture of Mrs. Scofield and the two little children was found after the shooting.

Facts About Photograph.

In the matter of the photograph alone, was there any foundation for these rumors. A group picture of Mrs. Scofield and her two children taken in the jail yard of her husband was found in Barkwell's trunk, but it was given to Barkwell by Scofield himself, according to the deputy sheriff's statement. At the time the photograph was taken Barkwell was a trusty in the jail and much attached to the Scofield children. He begged for the picture and Mr. Scofield gave it to him out of kindness and a desire to humor the man according to Scofield.

No Letters, Says Dayton.

"There were absolutely no letters found in Barkwell's possession from Mrs. Scofield," said Undersheriff George Dayton last night in reference to the sensational stories printed in the Denver papers. There is said to be a letter in the postoffice at Colorado City addressed to Barkwell and bearing a Los Angeles postmark, but I do not know that even this is more than a rumor. At all events there is no evidence that there has ever been improper relations between Barkwell and Scofield's wife. I believe that Barkwell was connected in some way with the Fehringer mystery and that this was the cause of the attack on Mr. Scofield.

Is Favorably Known Here.

Mrs. Scofield, whose maiden name was Edna McClelland, is well and favorably known in this district, having been adopted when a little girl and reared by former Justice McClelland and wife on a ranch five miles east of Falcon. She married Mr. Scofield about seven years ago and is now about 28 years of age. To her friends and the jail officials, with whom she comes more or less in contact through her duties as matron, she is known as a woman of kindly disposition and has always shown in a marked degree a deep devotion to her husband and children. She is at present visiting her father in Los Angeles, accompanied by her children.

Body Still at Morgue.

The body of Barkwell, who died in his own insane attempt to take the life of another, is still in the morgue awaiting funeral arrangements, which are being delayed while the coroner is trying to get some trace of the dead man's relatives. Barkwell left practically no resources, and it may be that the county may have to bear the cost of the funeral. The man carried an accident insurance policy, but owing to the nature of his death it is invalid.

ican cruisers which were put on board the vessels in response to the demand of ordnance officers for heavier guns than the eight-inch rifles of the West Virginia class. The heavier guns and turrets added nearly a thousand tons to the weight of the Tennessee and Washington over the West Virginia, and caused a thinning of the main armor belt from six to five inches. The turret protection was increased, however, from six inches to 9 inches. All of these big armored cruisers are ranked with the battleships in summing up their targets records, and for this reason their scores are of unusual interest at this time. When the world-girdling fleet is about to begin its target work.

System of Scoring.

There is a separate system of scoring, however, even among the battleships when it comes to classifying the work of the gunners for promotion and prize money distribution. Some of these ships, for instance, have 12-inch guns of 40 caliber, while others have the same number of rifles but of 45 caliber. In naval pieces the caliber means the length which, as it increases, permits of heavier shells and powder charges and calls for more accurate shootings. For this reason hits with a 45-caliber rifle do not call for as high an allowance of points as hits with the lower powered guns of the same class. The 13-inch rifles which are still retained on the Kentucky, Kearsarge, Alabama and Illinois, the oldest vessels of Admiral Evans' fleet, are expected to do more accurate work than the 12-inch rifles of the later range and large and the points allowed for their hits are even lower. There is a strong feeling against the ordnance officers of which there is now one assigned to each of the armed vessels of the navy, that the 13-inch gun will be in unofficial favor again and they will welcome the return to the heavier rifle, with its 1,100-pound projectile as against the 850-pound weight of the 12-inch shell.

The Illinois holds the battleship target trophy, won at the spring practice last year, but in the fall work the gunners of the Maine and the Louisiana is considered wondering results, the latter ship, which is in the same class as the Connecticut, and is armed with the most modern of the 12-inch rifles, won over $2,000 in prize money last fall and practically all of her officers and petty officers received a increase of pay per month.

BROOKS STOOD FOR BEST BILL

of the organization for your efforts in that behalf.

Thanking you and with assurances of great appreciation, I am,

Very truly yours,

D. W. ROSS,
Secretary.

Mining Survey Bill.

In the first session of the Fifty-[illegible] Congress, the very important mining survey bill was passed. This bill was introduced by Mr. Brooks in the House and was made the subject of a formal resolution by the Colorado Mine Operators association, in the following language:

Whereas, The passage through Congress of House bill No. 13,[illegible] has been successfully accomplished, and

Whereas, This bill is of the greatest importance to mine owners and operators, throughout the country in that it places mining titles upon a sounder basis than ever before, and

Whereas, The passage of the said bill through the House of Representatives was due primarily to the very persistent and able efforts of Congressman Franklin E. Brooks,

Therefore, Be It Resolved, by the Colorado Mine Operators association at its annual meeting of May 2, 1904, That a vote of thanks be extended to the Honorable Franklin E. Brooks for the very valuable and efficient service rendered by him to this association and to the mining industry, and the secretary of this association is hereby instructed to forward to him a copy of these resolutions.

The Colorado Mine Operators Association,
By F. J. CAMPBELL, President.
W. E. PASSMORE, Secretary.

From His Home People.

Mr. Brooks' work in the same Congress elicited from the Colorado Springs Real Estate exchange the following:

The Colorado Real Estate Exchange,
Colorado Springs, June 11, 1904.

Hon. Franklin E. Brooks, City.

Dear Sir—It gives me pleasure to advise you that at a recent meeting of the members of the Colorado Springs Real Estate exchange, a motion was carried instructing the secretary to convey to you, in the name of the exchange, the approval and appreciation of its members of the faithful and commendable manner in which you have handled the various matters arising in Congress, which efforts, we feel, have resulted in great good to the state, and particularly for your valuable services rendered in securing the large appropriation for irrigation projects in the state, as were as for the federal building in this city.

Very truly yours,
The Colorado Springs Real Estate Exchange, per J. H. Hosea, Secretary.

The Galveston Harbor.

In the same session he did much to secure the improvements for the harbor of Galveston at the request of numerous Colorado Springs constituents and this was commented upon as follows:

Galveston, Texas, May 26, 1904.

Hon. Franklin E. Brooks, United States Representatives, Colorado Springs, Colo.

[illegible] by the Galveston Deep Water committee to formally express to you our sincere appreciation of the assistance you rendered to our senators and congressmen and also to our special representative in Washington in respect to the measures affecting Galveston before the last session of congress. While we feel that our requests were meritorious, at the same time we know that without your effective co-operation and encouragement we could not have hoped for the splendid success that crowned the efforts of Galveston's friends. Indeed, the measure of this port's obligations to the representatives of Colorado at Washington can hardly be overestimated. Their generous and effective aid has been felt ever since the deep water at Galveston was first inaugurated. I assure you that the people of Galveston feel deeply grateful for all of these things, and our personal obligation to you in the premises is not lessened by the fact that not only Texas but the whole southwest reaps the benefit of every dollar spent in the protection and improvement of this its chief port. We hope that by our own endeavors it has in part at least been demonstrated we are not wholly unworthy of the trust reposed in us.

Again reassuring you of our appreciation of your help in these matters, we beg to indulge the hope that at some future time circumstances may permit us to be of some service to you or your people. It is needless to say with what avidity such an opportunity would be grasped by all of us and our friends.

Very respectfully,
R. WAVERLY SMITH,
Chairman.

In the Galveston Daily News of May 3, 1904, Ex-Congressman Gueshain, in making a report of the appropriations which had been made for the benefit of Galveston, took occasion to say in reference to Mr. Brooks:

"Too much cannot be said of the energetic, able and tactful work of representatives Gregg and Brooks. Both of these gentlemen, though new members in Congress, readily adapted themselves to the situation and Mr. Brooks particularly obtained for his state, Colorado, if I will venture to say, more than any new member in Congress did for his state.

Horse Breeding.

Mr. Brooks' work in securing the horse breeding establishment at Fort Collins, secured from the New York Evening Post the following comment:

"The Evening Post of New York, under date of May 8, 1904, has the following to say in reference to the work of Mr. Brooks in Congress:

"The agricultural appropriations passed last session contained an appropriation of $[illegible] for experiments in animal breeding and breeding which marks some thing of a new departure in the work of the department of agriculture. This was brought about by the business of Representative Brooks, of Colorado, who [illegible] that experiment station in Fort Collins, in that state. Mr. Brooks interest on this subject extends to many crops and a bill had been introduced before Mr. Brooks moved became a law to make for a special subject of inquiry. It prospects believe that a breed can be developed with the mountain climbing characteristics of the Colorado pony, but weighing 200 or 300 pounds more with corresponding speed and strength.

Mr. Brooks, who finally succeeded in getting this proposal embodied in the agricultural bill, against the opposition of Chairman Wadsworth, had been an unusually efficient and aggressive representative, especially for a new member.

In the Denver Republican of August 2, 1904, is the following testimonial to Mr. Brooks by Senator Warren:

"In Congress work of Mr. Brooks is spoken of as a preparatory school for statesmanship. Your good Brooks is one of the rare exceptions. He has accomplished a good deal in his first term. He is a great worker and a first-class man on committees. Really, I believe it would be a grave mistake on the part of Colorado to fail to return him, for I firmly believe he has a future before him in Congress.

TWO CALLS MADE BY LONE BANDIT

effort to make it as comfortable as possible for his victim. While tipping open the registered sacks the pseudo inspector cut one of his fingers and many pieces of mail were soon stained.

Pretended to Be Inspector.

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 15.—A special to the Pioneer Press from Spokane, Wash., says that the bandit who boarded the mail car of the Oriental Limited at Bonners Ferry, Idaho, early this morning secured admittance under the guise of postoffice inspector, giving the name of C. W. Bennett. John Nystrom, one of the postal clerks, was on duty at that hour while the other clerk, Benjamin Stumpf, was asleep under a table.

"Is there any mail in the car?" the bandit inquired. "There ought to be, please look."

Nystrom complied with the request and when he turned to inform the pretended inspector that there was none he looked into the muzzle of a revolver. After warning Nystrom not to make an outcry, the bandit directed him to get into the closet and proceed to sort the mail.

Clerk Awakens.

In about four hours Stumpf, who had awakened when the bandit first entered the car and had gone to sleep again when Nystrom informed him that an inspector was aboard, had again awakened. Thinking it strange that he had not been called, Stumpf looked toward the mail table and saw the stranger sorting letters. As the clerk was crawling from beneath the table under which he had slept, the bandit drew a revolver and told him to be still. He then threw a [illegible] over the clerk's head, bound his hands behind him and seated him in the far end of the car. Three times during the run to Spokane the bandit asked the clerk who was located in the small closet if he were suffering from suffocation and being answered in the affirmative he thrice opened the door and let the imprisoned man get some fresh air.

NO LOVE FOR U. S.

neither does the continent of Europe like Japan, care for similar reason. Her recently achieved naval and military [illegible] have brought [illegible] the front as the family of [illegible] nations a force that must be reckoned with within the world politics. It calls to mind [illegible] acquisition of the east, and then now is likely to mark a recession in European influence in Asia. Concomitant therewith, European commerce is suffering a serious check and is bound in future, in view of the wonderful commercial adaptibility and activity of the Japanese, to encounter a competition heretofore unknown. The yellow peril that loomed large in the earlier stages of the Russo-Japanese war still stalks the continent of Europe, although it is no longer politic to claim the same.

Would Like to See War.

It follows from this condition of affairs that nothing would be contemplated with greater complacency by the continental powers than a war between the United States and Japan. A taxing of the strength and a wasting of the resources of these two powers, not involving themselves, would stand to restore their relative power and prestige in the council of nations.

This explains the repeated rumors from Paris, Berlin and St. Petersburg of impending difficulties between the United States and Japan; the wish is father to the thought and the continued prediction of trouble is made in the hope of inciting the same. They expected some disaster to befall our fleet in its Pacific cruise. They consider Admiral Evans as something of a swashbuckler, and they regard the President as impulsive, and they seem to have really persuaded themselves that disaster or complications must ensue. The fleet proceeded on its journey not only without mishap, but in a manner calculated to [illegible] the sentiment. The reception it received has proved the wisdom of the cruise, and no one can fail to read from it the closer ties between the two Americas, which must be of a great commercial and political advantage in the future. Our European censors are proportionately disappointed.

England Our Only Friend.

It was never more apparent than now that the only European friend we have is England. England is the only European power that would not welcome a condition of affairs that might bring to us disaster or defeat. England's interests parallel ours, and anything that would impair our prestige would be alike prejudicial to her.

SENATOR WHITE ILL

BALTIMORE, Md., March 15.—United States Senator Pinkney White is ill at his home in this city, suffering from erysipelas and bladder disorder. His physicians say that while his condition is not critical it is sufficiently alarming. Senator White was taken ill in Washington Thursday and has since grown worse. His advanced age, 82 years, is against his chances of improvement.

HONGKONG, March 15.—Rennie Miller has been given $750,000 with which to build a university at Hongkong and incorporate with it the existing college of medicine. The government has made a grant of land.

[illegible] somewhat similar [illegible] under consideration here was adopted with great success. It is doubtful, however, if anything more definite along these lines will be made public until after the coming general election.

The influence that has undoubtedly prompted Japan to at least take into consideration this question of the future conduct of the railroads is stated to be the fact that, in view of the financial necessities of the coming 12 months, financiers believed that a foreign loan was inevitable, and that the foreign markets were sounded.

Foreign Money Hard to Get.

It then developed that Europe and America regarded the naval and military policies of Japan, which it has thought indicated an expectation of trouble, as fatal to Japan's credit as a borrower to large amounts in the foreign field. In other words, Japan has been told that money will not be forthcoming for the building up of an army and navy beyond such standard as is reasonable to expect Japan to maintain, and that the financial world would prefer to see Japan really and in earnest developing her resources for the betterment of her people, than taking those people for an army and navy, which, rightly or wrongly, are said to be destined for aggression sooner or later.

The reply of the Japanese government to this seems to have been that the financial program of the future contemplated a very large reduction of expenditures on the army and navy. But those who were in a position to lend money apparently rejoined that they would prefer a guarantee as to the expenditures of the money loaned, and added that, in common with so many people in Japan, they thought the nationalization of the railroads quite as great a mistake as too rapid and ambitious plans for army and navy.

Syndicate May Take Hold.

The outlined proposition, therefore, to which the government of Japan has lent an ear and which it is now considering, is that a syndicate of European financiers will assist Japan in working out the financial problem of the future, provided the Japanese government is content that this financial relief shall be applied to the betterment of her railroad system and for internal development.

The project is large, but there is an indication that a syndicate is serious in making the proposition and believes that only under such a plan can foreign capital to the extent of two or three hundred million yen be induced to lend favorably the investment of money in Japanese securities.

arch enemy of Roosevelt, is C. P. Hamlin's uncle. The war between Roosevelt and Harriman is a matter of common knowledge throughout the country, and none would be better pleased than Harriman to see Nephew Clarence Hamlin seated in the Senate to assist Uncle Senator Clarence Clark of Wyoming in his fight against the administration and its policies.

How They Figure It.

Senator Clark of Wyoming is one of the men whom Harriman can always count upon in his fight against Roosevelt, and naturally he would like his nephew with him so that his vote would be doubled. Senator Clark no doubt knows by experience what little ability it requires to obtain and hold a seat in the Senate, provided the financial interests are behind him and it is the most natural thing in the world that he should have set the senatorial bee to buzzing in the head of his Colorado Springs nephew on the principle that the interests that made uncle a senator can make "nephew" a senator likewise. In this Mr. Hamlin is carrying out his program and doing his utmost to comply with the wishes of his uncle, the antiadministration senator, and his friend Harriman.

Under such influences it needs no argument to show what Hamlin would do in the Roosevelt policies if he had a chance in the Senate or elsewhere.

The Tie That Binds.

Among the men of the mill trust who are backing Mr. Hamlin is a brother of Senator Boies Penrose of Pennsylvania, who is well known as an ally of Senator Clark of Wyoming and other antiadministration senators. Mr. Hamlin is a warm friend of Senator Penrose, the brother of Spencer Penrose of this city, and the idea that Hamlin in the Senate would go otherwise than in harmony with his best friend's brother is ridiculous.

Senator Penrose, who is one of the most bitter opponents of the President to be found in the Senate, would no doubt be glad to have Mr. Hamlin's vote to add to his own in fighting Roosevelt and supporting the Harriman interests. Harriman alone might well afford to pay the entire expenses of Mr. Hamlin's campaign for a vote that would be always sure and certain.

[illegible] Mr. Hamlin to have his nomination [illegible] some other [illegible] than announcement of his Roosevelt principles in the billboards.

ROBBERS OVERPOWER POSSE

Take Rifles Away From Their Pursuers and Force Them Back.

COFFEYVILLE, Kan., March 15.—At 11 o'clock this morning three members of the Dalton gang of robbers held up the bank at Caney, Kan., eight miles southeast of Coffeyville, where they were waiting for an oil lease company to get dinner for them. The members of the posse were ordered to halt and throw up their hands. They complied at once. The robbers broke up the posse's rifles, took away their pistols and also one of their horses and then permitted them to depart unarmed. After dinner, the bandits fled farther into the Osage hills, tonight they are believed to be a short distance east of Big Heart, Okla. A posse of 150 is about to leave Big Heart, hoping to surround the outlaws.

SAILORS ROYALLY ENTERTAINED

Bull Fights, Ball Games and Other Sports at Panama for Members of Torpedo Flotilla.

PANAMA, March 15.—Lieut. H. L. Cole, commander of the American torpedo flotilla, and the officers and men were delighted with their reception here. This morning the destroyers moved up closer to Panama, and it is [illegible] the acre limits. They will be open to visitors every afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock.

All the men of the flotilla are proud of the record which the little boats have made. With the exception of a few minor repairs, the destroyers are practically in the same condition as when they left the United States.

Last evening the officers of the fleet attended a dance at the Tivoli club, where they met many of the prominent people of the city and the canal zone. There was a baseball game today between a nine from the destroyer Stewart and a local team, and later every man who could be spared from the boats went to see a grand bull fight in which both male and female bull fighters took part.

POLICE STOP MEETINGS

Socialists and Zionists in Philadelphia Aroused.

PHILADELPHIA, March 15.—Acting under orders from Director of Public Safety Clay, the police tonight dispersed the socialists and their followers by stopping a number of meetings which were scheduled to take place in various sections of the city.

One of these was a Zionist meeting at which Dr. Charles Worstman of New York, a former professor in Heidelberg university, was to have talked on the Zionist movement or the return of the Jews to Palestine. The stopping of this meeting caused those who had arranged for it to retain counsel, who they say, will tomorrow go into court and ask for an injunction to restrain the police from interfering with their future gatherings.

SOME OF MR. HAMLIN'S CONNECTIONS.

MR. HAMLIN'S campaign managers have decorated the billboards and dead walls in this city with flaming announcements that their candidate is "a Roosevelt man." Let us see.

There are scores of people in this city—most of them Mr. Hamlin's club friends and acquaintances—who can bear eloquent testimony on this point. They know, as well as they know that the sun will rise tomorrow morning, that Mr. Hamlin is not a Roosevelt man, and that he has not been a Roosevelt man for a long, long time. This is not a matter that admits of dispute. For years his expressions on the subject have been many and decidedly to the point. He has put himself on record.

When the panic struck the country last October there was no man in Colorado Springs more outspoken than Mr. Hamlin in attributing the blame to President Roosevelt. His attitude was contemptuous, snarling, denunciatory. He regarded the President as a reckless marauder intent on destroying the business fabric of the country.

That's the kind of a "Roosevelt man" Mr. Hamlin was last winter, and that's the kind he is now—at heart. His close friends and political allies, the gentlemen of the Mill Trust, feel exactly the same way about it, and people who have talked with them on the subject know that they make no bones of saying so. Of course, since Mr. Hamlin came out into the open as a Senatorial candidate he has been a little more guarded. He has trimmed his sails closer to the Roosevelt breezes, and in public talks volubly of his perfervid admiration for the President and the President's policies. But when he gets home, closeted with a trusted friend and opens the phials of his capitalistic wrath, it is safe to suppose that E. H. Harriman was doing the talking.

In this connection it is interesting to note some of Mr. Hamlin's SOME OTHER: but not illegal connections outside of Colorado. He is a nephew of Senator Clarence D. Clark, of Wyoming, who has been lined up against the Roosevelt Administration ever since an anti-Roosevelt faction in the Senate was formed. Senator Clark is commonly regarded as one of the assets of Mr. Harriman, who himself would hardly be accused of warm friendliness to the President. If Uncle Clarence has any influence with Nephew Clarence it is easy to guess the answer—at least on all questions at issue between the Senate and the White House.

Another connection of Mr. Hamlin's which may be of value as indicating his attitude toward the Administration is the fact that Senator Boies Penrose, of Pennsylvania, an avowed anti-administration man, is a brother-in-law of Mr. Hamlin's. After being nominated he gave a dinner given by Senator Penrose about a year ago that the first inkling of the famous "five-million-dollar conspiracy" against Roosevelt is supposed to have leaked out. Mr. Hamlin is a warm friend of Senator Penrose as well as of the Senator's brother, and if he succeeded in acquiring a loan it would not be long before he would be filling a seat in the Penrose-Foraker-Clark camp of anti-administration Senators.

It is true that when the next Senator from Colorado takes his seat President Roosevelt will have retired from office. But it is practically certain that Senator-elect will be a follower of his, a most ardent admirer, and he will be Secretary Taft. And it is to be expected that the anti-Roosevelt Senators will then maintain the same attitude as at present—an attitude of opposition to all reforms in the conduct of railroads and other great corporations. Colorado does not want that kind of a Senator in the seat now occupied by Henry M. Teller.

Death-bed repentance is usually insincere. It would have been better for Mr. Hamlin if he had discovered his love for Roosevelt before incautiously committing himself to the other side. Or at least he might have waited and have refrained from inundating himself on all the billboards as a zealous Administration man.

A CANDIDATE WITHOUT A RECORD.

MR. HAMLIN'S admirable still occupies The Gazette's invitation to publish Mr. Hamlin's reasons for believing himself qualified for the duties of United States Senator. Mr. Hamlin still fails to offer any reasonable excuse for his candidacy other than the fact that he wants the job. Of course everybody knows that he wants it, but nobody knows why he should have it.

He has been urged to publish his record, but the truth is that he has none. His public services have been so inconspicuous that his own organ declines to mention them. He was elected district attorney a few years ago, but immediately turned the office over to his deputies and continued to devote himself to the pleasures of club life. As an automobile enthusiast and a golf player Mr. Hamlin has been a shining success, but as District Attorney he has been and is about the most lamentable failure that has held the office since the days of Bill Stone. Not a single prosecution of importance has been undertaken by him in his two years of office in this part of Colorado in many years. No wonder The Telegraph remains silent as to his record.

Mr. Hamlin is a candidate without a record, a reason or an excuse. A professed Republican, he has sought and received the aid of Democratic newspapers and Democratic workers. A vaunted exponent of clean politics, he is conducting a campaign the most conspicuous feature of which is the lavish use of money. A self-proclaimed "friend of the people," his main backers are trust capitalists and his most influential political connections are with the Senators who are known as avowed enemies of the Roosevelt Administration.

Watch the people snow him under.

TIPSY TROLLEY POLES.

IT would be mighty interesting to know which one of the mighty intellects that direct the affairs of the Street Railway Company hoosed the job of putting up those new trolley poles on North Tejon street. Not that the knowledge would add to his fame, or produce a sudden demand for his services on the part of up-to-date street railway companies in other cities, for it wouldn't. But it would be some satisfaction to the public just to identify a man whose ingrowing bumps caused him to perform this remarkable construction feat.

Instead of being set straight, as the old poles are, or inclined slightly away from the street in order to resist the tension of the cross wires, these poles are inclined at an angle so sharp that a plumb line dropped from the top of one of them would fall in the middle of the sidewalk. In other words, they are about four feet out of a vertical line. If the intention was to make them resist the pull of the cross wires, the job is a success. A ten-ton weight hung on the cross wires couldn't pull them to a vertical position. And as for keeping the feed wires away from the main branches of the trees, the inclined poles are no better than if they had been set straight.

As a contribution to civic beauty this latest effort of the Street Railway Company can hardly be regarded as a success. The long rows of slanting poles present a tipsy appearance, which strongly suggests that the construction gang that put them up was too woozy to see straight. But this is hardly probable. The more reasonable explanation is that the company felt called upon to give another of its public demonstrations of how little it really knows about running a street railway system.

BELLIGERENT JAPAN.

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

Japan appears to be in a scrapping mood. Her victory over Russia did not incline her to convert her swords into plowshares. Instead, she has added to her store of warlike implements and devotes a good deal of her time and money to keeping them sharp. It is not inconceivable that she may some day use them in a fashion that will blunt them.

A COSTLY HABIT.

From the New Haven Journal.

There doesn't seem to be much money to burn in sight just now, but that may be because we have burned so much. In the last three years the money losses by fire in the United States and Canada have amounted to $550,000,000. This, it is pointed out, is more than one-third the total cost of the war between Russia and Japan. It is only $100,000,000 less than the net public debt of the United States.

INVESTIGATION.

From the New York Herald.

The smoke is at last clearing in the naval controversy. Two well-known officers of the line have been ordered to explain their share in the preparation of an unkindly and apparently exaggerated attack on the material and administration of the fleet. This contribution of dissent was signed by a civilian whose expertness is so open to mature doubt, that, as his publishers now confess, it must be taken not as his or that of any one man, inasmuch as it was amplified by many real experts.

RUSSIA'S FALLEN IDOL.

From the New York Tribune.

The case of General Stoessel may not be unique, but it certainly is exceptional. We have seen many courts-martial amid the aftermath of wars, and men who were at first acclaimed as heroes revealed and feared as common and base clay. We have seen such men arraigned and vindicated, we have seen such men fought before tribunals, with the judgments of the battlefield sometimes reversed and sometimes confirmed. But not in our day, we think, has another man been so suddenly cast down from the highest pinnacle of praise to the lowest depth of contempt and condemnation as has General Stoessel, or has the aspect of another great military achievement been so completely and so rudely transformed.

IN DEFENSE OF CATS.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Is it a fact that the cat is an enemy of birds and other animals to such an extent that we could be better off without the cat than without the creatures he destroys? Without a census it is impossible to decide this question, but we have no doubt that if put to a vote all the rats and mice in the world would vote that the cats should go. It seems that here is another case where it is not prudent to indulge in too wide generalizations. There are cats and cats. Some people, and we do not refer to the female sex unmarried only, bestow an amount of affection on cats which it worthily bestowed on some human beings of the species we would greatly add to the joy of the world. Some people do not like cats in general or particular, but in this country the principle of the greatest good to the greatest number applies, and on a vote by human beings the cat would probably win.

SAVE THE WILD FOWL.

From the Boston Transcript.

There are plenty of proofs that several species of birds existed right here in New England which are found here no longer. The wild pigeon, wild turkey, pinnated grouse, sandhill crane and the great auk have literally been extirpated from New England. The argument is that the shooting of birds at their mating season strikes at the source of their existence. Unless the spring and summer be made a close season we shall soon see no more of the eiders, plovers, wild swans, widgeons, wood duck, red duck and teal of New England. It is possible for the winged tribes to endure the thinning out of the shooting in the fall, but the slaughter at the pairing season threatens the existence of whole genera. Many would have disappeared before now, but for the protection they have received from the laws of Canada and in certain of our states during their spring migration.

THE RIGHT MAN FOR SENATOR.

To the Editor of The Gazette:

He that steals my purse steals trash; but he who purloins from me my good name robs me of that which not enriches him, but makes me poor indeed.—Shakespeare.

Less than one year ago one could hear nothing but words of praise for Hon. F. E. Brooks. Why this great change? It is not that Mr. Brooks has changed in any way from the sentimentally ex-member of Congress and indefatigable worker for the general good of his state, is it? Let us be honest with ourselves and look this fairly and squarely in the face. A number of disgruntled politicians, envious of the record made by Mr. Brooks, get together and find a party with a barrel and the backing of a large corporation that went hand in hand with the great corporation that bought the present Republican seat in the United States Senate. Then they commenced a war on Mr. Brooks that for villainous overshadows all the dirty politics that has marked the methods of certain gangs that have almost made the name of Colorado one that every patriotic citizen might well be ashamed of.

Fortunately, there is a large class of our citizens, both men and women, who, as a rule, do not take a great deal of interest in our primaries, but who have become aroused at this uncalled for fight on Mr. Brooks that will turn out next Wednesday and, by their emphatic votes, give this gang a surprise that will be everlastingly beneficial to El Paso county.

It is to that class that this appeals. They have a very certain price in not only El Paso county, but also in the state of Colorado, and one rotten deal by which a seat in the United States Senate was glaringly bought, is enough for them. At the primaries next Wednesday this class will be found doing their duty fearlessly.

One of the arguments used by adherents of Mr. Hamlin is, that if Mr. Brooks is elected to the Senate, the state of Colorado need not look for anything that he asks for, as Mr. Guggenheim and the interests that he represents in this state will oppose everything that Mr. Brooks advocates. On the other hand, if Mr. Hamlin is elected, he can get anything he asks for.

Do they think that our people are so stupid that they can be made to believe any such rot as that Mr. Guggenheim is undoubtedly receiving such courtesy as senators usually show to each other, but even with his $50,000,000 at his back he is looked upon as a very small item in that great body. Ninety per cent of the members of the Senate are patriotic, honorable statesmen, and while they are obliged to associate with such members as purchase their positions in that body, they have supreme contempt for them all the same.

Again, I say that next Wednesday the great mass of the patriotic men and women of this city, that the opponents of Mr. Brooks dare not approach with their contemptible methods, will assemble at the primaries and administer a rebuke to that crowd that should be a lesson to them for all time.

Today's Horoscope

"The stars incline, but do not compel."

Monday, March 16, 1908.

Let wedding bells peal. Plight troth with a ring. The planet of woman will happiness bring.

The 76th day. Moon 11 days old, having Venus in benefic aspect.

A favorable day for courtship. Press thy suit.

An equally fortunate day for marriage or wedding journeys, especially in the morning.

Be cautious and look well into all business matters. Study new offers and demand proof. Take heed against a plausible tongue.

Be cautious in handling sharp tools.

There is danger from "falling places" in these 24 hours. Use more than ordinary care in approaching or passing old walls, broken-down buildings, dams, and high fences. Walk not under overhanging banks.

In the evening the auspices are good for seeking amusement, visiting or receiving friends.

A fortunate birthdate for women. They will win social recognition in a long-desired quarter. The unmarried will be wooed.

Money and business will increase with care and prudence for the man with this birthday. Unwise insistence on a matter of mere dignity threatens his promotion.

The girl born today will be fortunate in marriage. She will have a taste for art, which should be encouraged.

The boy born this day will be kind, generous and well-conducted. He will be rather successful in business.

EDITOR'S APOSTROPHE TO LIMBURGER.

From the Freewater (Ore.) Times.

Owing to the fact that the restaurants went out of business the first of the week, the editor and staff are baching—that and other reasons—and yesterday a rural subscriber brought us in a piece of limburger cheese, saying that if we didn't care to eat it we could use it to drive away ants. Will it drive away ants? Will it? Verily I say unto you, it will drive them out of a canyon; it will drive buzzards away from a carcass; it will drive a herd of buffalo through a burning forest and a mule through a barbed wire fence; it will drive a man crazy if compelled to stay within twenty feet of its polluted presence; indeed, it will drive away ants and mules, too, and mothers and fathers, brothers, sisters, and grandmothers, even to the seventh generation; still there are some who claim to like limburger.

TWO EVENTS PULLED OFF.

From the Mt. Pleasant (Iowa) Pyramid.

Some of Mt. Pleasant's young boys have been under the influence of the planet Mars this week and in consequence some fearful battles—bloodless but not mauless—took place for several days. One was between a couple of 12-year-olds, who, being unable to settle their tremendous differences by the modern methods of arbitration, retired to a back alley and fought it out with bare fists. A big crowd of older boys and men (who ought to have known better) witnessed the scrimmage, which lasted over an hour. The two youngsters kept at the work for that time, with only one minute rest, and finally welcomed peace negotiations which declared the bout a draw. Another affair was pulled off on Main street in front of the postoffice and was over a dog fight. The owners of the respective dogs backed their favorites with such zeal that they got themselves at it. Nobody was hurt but lots of mud was wiped up.

The One Thing Necessary

Stiffen Up Your Backbone and if You're a Fighter You Will Win.

By Marion Dix Burke in the Colorado Springs Tribune.

CHARLES SUMNER said: "There are three things necessary: (1) Backbone, (2) backbone, (3) backbone." When Lincoln was asked how Grant impressed him as a general, he replied:

"The greatest thing about him is his cool persistence of purpose; he has the grip of a bulldog; when once he gets his teeth in, nothing can shake him."

This was the whole compendium of Grant's character, his epitome as a soldier. Nothing could shake him off. With him it was, "On to Richmond," and "I shall fight it out on this line if it takes all summer," that broke the backbone of the rebellion and eventually made Lee surrender. This wonderful man, at 38 an obscure citizen of Galena, drawing but $50 a year in his father's tannery, at 46 was one of the greatest generals of history.

Can't Spare Hard Fighter.

After his defeat at Shiloh nearly every newspaper of both parties in the north, almost every member of Congress and public sentiment all over the country clamored for his removal. Friends of Lincoln pleaded with him as President to give the command to someone else, not along for the good of the country, but for the sake of his own reputation.

The President listened one night for hours until the clock struck 1. Then, after a long silence, he said: "I can't spare this man; he fights." It was Lincoln's insight and determination that saved Grant from the storm of popular passion and so gave us the greatest hero of the Civil war.

When Phil Sheridan found his army retiring before the victorious Early, the general in command said:

"O, sir, we are beaten."

"No, sir," said Sheridan, "you are beaten, but not this army."

Stand Firm Under Fire.

Then, seizing his army as Jupiter his thunderbolt, he hurled it upon the enemy and snatched victory from defeat.

Do you know how Gen. Thomas Jonathan Jackson received the sobriquet of "Stonewall," which never left him? The troops of South Carolina, commanded by General Bell, had been overwhelmed at the battle of Manassas, and he rode up to Jackson in despair, exclaiming:

"They are beating us back."

"Then," said Jackson, "we will give them the bayonet."

Bell rode off to rejoin his command, and cried out to them to look at Jackson, saying:

"There he stands like a stone wall—rallyed behind the Virginians!"

"It is in me, and shall come out," said Richard Brinsley Sheridan, when told that he would never make an orator, as he had failed in his first speech in parliament. He became one of the foremost orators of his day.

Garrison Undeterred by Rope.

Behold William Lloyd Garrison! A broad-cloth mob is leading him through the streets of Boston by a rope; he is hurried to jail. He returns unflinchingly to his work, beginning at the point at which he was interrupted. Note this heading in the Liberator:

"I am in earnest. I will not equivocate. I will not excuse. I will not retreat a single inch, and I will be heard."

That one man of grit became God's red-hot thunderbolt, that shivered that colossal iniquity—slavery. Even the gallows erected in front of his doors did not daunt him. His grit made an unwilling world hear the word "Freedom," which was destined never to cease its vibrations until it had breathed its sweet secret to the last slave.

Even Brainless Grit Wins.

Clear grit always commands respect; it is the quality which achieves something, and everybody admires achievement. Backbone, even without brains, will carry against brains without backbone. Seeming impossibilities surrender to invincible purpose and imperial energy. Kitto, the master of oriental learning, lost his hearing at 12, and his father's circumstances became so wretched that young Kitto was sent to the poor house, where he learned shoemaking.

He piteously begged his father to take him out of the poorhouse, saying that he would live upon blackberries and field turnips and be willing to sleep on a haytick. What obstacles could dampen the enthusiasm of such ardor, what impossibilities could withstand such a resolute will?

Patrick Henry had clear grit when in the Virginia house of burgesses, amid cries of "Treason!" he stood up and said: "Is life so dear or peace so sweet as to be purchased at the price of chains and slavery? I know not what course others may take, but as for me, give me liberty or give me death!"

If You Die, Die Fighting.

Grit is that element of character which in itself has the power to control and command. It pilots the ship through sunshine and storm, through sleet and rain, even when there is a leak and the crew is mutinous, and never gives up the helm until it steers into the harbor of success. It will bring a man through when every other quality will fail him.

Henry M. Stanley, speaking of his success in Africa against tremendous odds, says:

"No matter how near death I might be, or if I were in the hands of the savages, tortured and surrounded by wards, I should never yield without one last desperate struggle. I should be overpowered, but what of that? I had died fighting."

When Gen. Gordon saw a soldier at Appomattox running away from the battle at the top of his speed he stopped him and demanded:

"What are you running for?"

"Because I can't fly." And on he went. How many run away from battle and victory just that way!

Get Up After Every Blow.

Irresistible determination, looking for future triumph through present trial, has always begotten confidence and commanded success. Cæsar would not have crossed the Rubicon nor Washington the Delaware had they not fixed their stern gaze on objects far beyond the perils at their feet.

Most of the failures in life are due to want of grit or nerve. A yielding disposition, or, in other words, no backbone to stiffen up a course and pursue it steadily, unswervingly, to the end, leaves many a one behind in the life race. You know how the boy said he learned to skate—by getting up every time he fell down and trying again.

Men who have been always successful have often been defeated, but they turned each defeat into a stepping stone to further progress.

Blind Heroine Conquers All.

Edmund Burke said: "Never despair, but if you do work on in despair." Every successful man is the story of an iron will and invincible determination. Franklin dined on a small loaf in a printing office, with a book in his hand.

Locke lived on bread and water in a Dutch garret. It was this same indomitable spirit that sustained Lincoln and Garfield on their hard journey from the log cabin and the towpath to the splendors of the White house.

Prescott was blind, but he put grit in place of eyesight into his work and became one of our greatest historians. In our own time a remarkable instance of what grit can do, even when handicapped by seemingly insurmountable obstacles, is presented in the case of the deaf, dumb and blind girl, Helen Keller.

Miss Keller has conquered all, and despite her defects has demonstrated that she is able to take her place in almost any line with her more fortunate compeers. In her blindness she sees the beauty of the universe, in her deafness she hears the music of the spheres through the ears of a contented mind, and with her deft fingers she voices the emotions of her being, and the happy thoughts that [illegible] moaning her fate, she would not exchange places with queens.

Jew Wins Highest Post.

Another great specimen of grit and determined manhood was manifested in the statesman Jew, Benjamin Disraeli, afterward Lord Beaconsfield. Scoffed at in the House of Commons on account of his race, he built faith:

"The time will come when you will hear me," and so it did.

On another occasion, when attacked, he thus acknowledged and defended the faith of his race:

"Yes, I am a Jew, and when the ancestors of the honorable gentleman were savages in an unknown island mine were priests in the temple."

With such qualities as that you can not keep a man down; he will make stepping stones of stumbling blocks and cross the river of opposition to the bank of success. Imagine England's surprise when the hated Jew became Prime Minister and got a seat on the woolsack!

Chances Here for Everybody.

Louisa M. Alcott fought poverty for twenty years, fighting it with splitting headaches, weary limbs and aching heart, but she made over $200,000 with her pen and cleared all the family debts, even those outlawed. Her grit alone sustained her against ill health.

The story of successful men and women who sprang from a humble origin and had no opportunity save that which they made for themselves should put to shame the grumblers who complain of hard fortune and tell you they have no chance.

Everybody has a chance, for everybody can make his or her own chance. Don't fly off the track, keep steadily on, and you will reach the goal. With Robert Herrick say:

Tumble me down, and I will sit
Upon my ruins, smiling yet:
Tear me to tatters, yet I'll be
Patient in my necessity;
Laugh at my scraps of clothes and shun
Me as a fear'd infection.
Yet, scarecrow-like, I'll walk as one
Neglecting thy derision."

FINGEY HAS A SLOGAN.

From the New York Tribune.

William J. Conners, chairman of the Democratic committee, has invented a slogan which he says would sweep Governor Johnson into the White House if the Democratic National convention would name Johnson for president.

"From the Washtub to the White House" would be a winning battle cry," said Mr. Conners yesterday. "How could they beat the Democrats if we had that for a campaign cry. From the washtub to the White House?"

"Are you sure that Governor Johnson would care to stand for a slogan of that sort?" he was asked.

"Why not?" said Mr. Conners. "It strikes a responsive chord in the breast of every plain citizen in the United States, and if we have the plain people with us what more do we want?"

Mr. Conners admitted that Mr. Bryan was coming along strong for the nomination, but he said he hoped he would not be nominated.

"There are many men more eligible than Mr. Bryan," said he. "Take Governor Johnson, of Minnesota, for instance. He is the sort of man you can't find fault with. He is a man of the people. With him as a candidate, and with 'From the Washtub to the White House' for a campaign slogan Democracy would win a great victory at the polls. Judge Harmon, too, is a more representative candidate than Mr. Bryan. Lieutenant-Governor Chanler I also regard as more eligible than Mr. Bryan, but I am not going to talk politics for some time to come."

Mr. Conners will try to see Charles F. Murphy today or tomorrow before he leaves here for Florida to spend the winter.

PERKINS AND SHEARER SELL GOODS TO DENVER FIRM.

Will Go Fast This Week to Buy New Supply—Store to Be Remodeled at Once.

The firm of Perkins and Shearer has sold the entire remaining portion of its stock to the Golden Eagle company of Denver and the store will be emptied of its contents today. The consideration involved is not made public.

On Wednesday of this week, contractors will begin the work of remodeling the store and on Thursday Messrs. Perkins and Shearer will leave for New York and other eastern points to purchase a new stock. The store will be entirely renovated and refurnished by the time the new goods arrive. It is the plan to open the store again on May 2, at which time patrons will find one of the finest stocks in the west from which to make their selections. No one article from the present stock will be carried over, everything having been disposed of to the Denver firm.

Messrs. Perkins and Shearer are now the sole owners of the business, A. S. Holbrook, senior member, having disposed of his interest to them immediately after the recent fire which damaged their stock and resulted in one of the biggest fire sales ever held in Colorado Springs.

Until the store reopens, the firm will maintain an office in room No. 3, Bank building, where all business will be attended to.

NURSE HOLDS SECRET

COULD CLEAR MYSTERY OF DOORSTEP BABY.

Was Waif the One in Whose Behalf Want Ad. Was Printed in Gazette Last Week?

Sworn to silence upon her honor as a friend and the sacred trust imposed upon a professional attendant, one woman, a trained nurse, holds the secret that could, were it revealed, clear the mystery surrounding the sacrifice of a pretty two-weeks-old baby by its mother to strangers. While the mother fully realizes that her baby is gone from her life, even she has no knowledge of the identity of its foster parents.

[illegible] of the child live in this city and that they are well to do and prominent, the nurse is noncommital, declaring that "while the story might be of interest to the public, it would be lifelong grief to the family."

An effort made yesterday to establish the identity of the baby left shortly before Knight Friday at the door of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Goehnauer, 215 East Las Vegas street, recalled an advertisement in the want columns of The Gazette of March 9, to the effect that a home was wanted for a baby born March 5.

Between the description of the girl baby left on the porch and the "want ad. baby" exists a strong resemblance. Both were born on the same day and have black eyes and black hair. Persons who claim to be familiar with the case, declare that the baby left at the door is, in their opinion, the one for whom a home was sought through the papers.

Mr. and Mrs. Goehnauer are happy over the coming of the little one into their home and have decided to adopt it.

BUCHTEL FOR BROOKS

BUT IS NOT TAKING PART IN PRESENT CAMPAIGN.

Governor Preaches Here and at Colorado City—Goes to Denver Today.

"I see no reason why the people of Colorado Springs should not indorse the Honorable Franklin E. Brooks, as a candidate for the United States senate," said Governor Henry A. Buchtel yesterday, while in the city to deliver sermons at the Asbury M. E. church and Colorado City.

"Certain papers have insinuated that my object in coming here at this time was to help Mr. Brooks in his campaign," said the governor, "but I had no such intention and I think such a statement is very unjust, for I am not in the present contest in any way. Mr. Brooks is a good friend of mine and I think he made a splendid record in Congress. I do not know Mr. Hanna, and, as I have said before, I am not taking an active part in the present contest between the two men. I see no reason, however, why the people of this county should not support Mr. Brooks for the Senate."

Governor Buchtel is the guest in this city of the Rev. H. E. Bird of 1031 Washington avenue and of William Lennox of 1001 North Nevada avenue. He will return to Denver this morning.

OPTION ON PATENT EXPIRES

Definite Action on Construction of Proposed Crystal Park Road May Be Taken This Week.

Although the option which the promoters of the proposed Manitou and Crystal Park railroad for the right to use the patent on Colonel Lewis Ginger's incline railway expired yesterday, the company has not given up the project and, in fact, some definite action will probably be taken this week. Cyrus W. Dolph, president of the road, has received from W. C. Dotterer of New York amended articles of incorporation which are to be filed with the secretary of state. With these articles Mr. Dotterer wrote a letter in which he stated that his visit to this city in the interests of the project, which has been deferred from time to time, will probably be made some time this week. Definite action in regard to the construction of the road will be taken.

Colonel Ginger stated yesterday that he had heard nothing concerning the option. He states that the option will probably not be renewed, as he has several other propositions in view.

COLORED CITIZENS TO MEET

Will Hold Rally in Support of Hon. Franklin E. Brooks at G. A. R. Hall Tonight.

In order to impress upon members of their race the importance of supporting the Honorable Franklin E. Brooks the colored Republicans of the city will hold a rally in G. A. R. hall this evening at 8 o'clock. Prominent negroes from all over the state will be present. Music will be furnished by the Centennial band, the Treble Clef club and St. John's Jubilee singers. Refreshments will be served free. Everybody is invited.

Prominent colored Republicans in all sections of the state are rallying to the Brooks standard and are offering their services to aid him. They hold that Mr. Brooks should be judged by the members of their race according to his life record of friendship to them.

COUSINS TO BE MARRIED

Denied a License Here, They Get One at Denver.

Determined to wed even though they are cousins and had been refused a license by the county clerk in this city on the ground that such action is in violation of the state law, Horatio W. White and Bertha White, both of Colorado Springs, went to Denver and procured a marriage license last Saturday. The wedding has not yet been announced.

AFRICAN SNAILS ARE MUSICAL

From the Chicago Tribune.

African snails are as big as a man's fists, and their eggs are as large as pigeon eggs and have the same color and texture. When traveling together they produce aeolian music, apparently by the movement of the shell over the bark of the trees as they travel in search of food. Large as are the eggs of this remarkable snail, those of a near ally, known to snail scientists as Borus maximus, are still larger, approaching the size of a bantam hen's egg. Because of the big egg, there is larvae. When the snail emerges at the time of hatching it is like the adult in everything except size.

DOG WITH A FALSE EAR.

Stories about New York's police dog squad seemed to have inspired other cities to bid for fame with bow-wow farces. Philadelphia comes forward with a tale of Dodo, a dog with an artificial ear. Dodo, it appears, is a most natural spaniel, owned by a Sixtieth street shoemaker. About two weeks ago the dog attempted to cross in front of a Market street car and the wheels cut off his left ear. Dodo's ears were long and of a light brown hue, and the loss of one made him look lopsided. To make matters worse, persons looked at the dog and laughed, and this annoyed the old shoemaker, who is rather proud of his pet. The other day Dodo appeared with a new ear, which is just as good looking and durable as the real hearing appendage was. His master made it of light brown leather, which was covered with curly brown wool to give the natural effect. The ear is held in place by means of a rubber band, which is fastened around the dog's head.

"PEPPER" ARRESTED

EDWARD REINHARDT HELD ON SERIOUS CHARGE.

Gets Beating at Hands of Unknown Man for Intruding at Logan Home.

Edward Reinhardt, of Huerfano street barber, doing at 101 South Weber street, was arrested at an early hour yesterday morning for peeping into the windows of the house occupied by Mrs. S. A. Logan and family at 121 East Vermijo street. Reinhardt was caught in the act by a passerby, who gave the name of Williams, and who thrashed the alleged intruder almost into insensibility before the arrival of the police, who took him to the station in the patrol wagon.

Mrs. Logan's Story.

According to the story told by Mrs. Logan to Chief of Police Reynolds, she and her daughter, who is an operator in the telephone office, were preparing to retire for the night when she happened to glance through the window and saw the shadow of a man outside. At the same moment she heard the steps of a man on the sidewalk. She ran to the front door and told him a man was trying to get into the house. The man went around the house and came upon Reinhardt as he stood peeping through the window.

"What are you doing there?" he asked.

"I am Burns, the detective," was the reply of Reinhardt, "and you had better go about your business and leave me alone."

"I happen to know Burns and I know you are not the man," answered Williams, whereupon, it is said Reinhardt struck him over the head with a heavy walking stick which he carried.

Gives Reinhardt Beating.

Williams, a powerful fellow, grappled with his assailant and, wresting the cane from his grasp, gave him a terrible beating. [illegible] and body, felling him to the ground. He held Reinhardt a prisoner until the arrival of the police who had been summoned by telephone by the terrified women. Williams left the place without giving his full name or address and the police have not been able to locate him and are not sure that he gave Mrs. Logan his right name. He is wanted as the chief witness to the complaint of impersonating an officer which will be made in police court today against Reinhardt.

Reinhardt has been in the limelight in this city before on account of offending women and was sentenced to a term in the penitentiary about four years ago, part of which he served. He came into notice at the time of the arrest of William Bisnapff in connection with the Feuringer case, being a witness to prove an alibi for the prisoner.

CANON FIRES TABOOED

PARK BOARD FORCED TO TAKE DRASTIC MEASURES.

Will Make Example of Some of Offenders If Practice Is Continued.

Several girls whose names are withheld, and two men, E. Ellis and W. H. Snelson, will appear in police court this morning to answer to the charge of lighting fires in North Cheyenne canon in direct violation of the city ordinances. Both of the men are in jail awaiting trial.

The girls, who indignantly declare that they are innocent of any intention of breaking the law, were preparing coffee for a picnic dinner when they were placed under arrest. After giving their names and addresses they were permitted to go home. Ellis was arrested Saturday night and Snelson early Sunday morning.

Unless the practice of lighting fires in North Cheyenne canon is stopped, the members of the park commission declare that they will be forced to make an example of some of the offenders. A number of disastrous fires, notably one on Cutler mountain about three weeks ago, which resulted in the destruction of several acres of timber, have originated from fires built on prohibited grounds. No one is permitted to build fires in the canon except at places designated by signs.

Dangers of the Grip.

The greatest danger from la grippe is of its resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for la grippe, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia. For sale by all druggists.

At the same time, a somewhat similar course of meetings, although along more conventionally religious lines, was begun in Orchestra hall, Chicago. These are maintained by a number of wealthy men, who have organized themselves into the Sunday Evening Service club. Preachers of many creeds, including a Roman Catholic bishop, are on the list of speakers.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON AND YOUNG PEOPLE'S TOPIC

FORTHTELLERS OF THE BEST

The International Sunday School Lesson for March 22, a Quarterly Review.

BY WILLIAM T. ELLIS

A church is distinguished from a lodge by the fact that the former seeks for its own advantage what he gives, while the latter proclaims to the world for the benefit of humanity, all his discoveries. The unwritten law among honorable scientists is that the best one knows belongs to all men.

This same principle runs as a golden thread through the book of Jesus, which the Sunday schools have been studying for the past three months. It has, altogether been, on the part of a variety of men, a forthtelling of the best they knew. In conventional religious terminology, the lessons have been studies in witness-bearing.

The primary obligation of life is that which rests upon the man of science, and which was accepted by the characters who move in noble procession through these pages—the obligation to testify to the truth as it has been received. That is the main business of the preacher. It is likewise the great mission of the worthiest church-life. Scholarship holds this as its highest creed. And the plain man of the street can do no better service to his fellowman than to tell forth modestly, resolutely and unfailingly the best things they know. Incidentally, that simple rule would dam a goodly flood of idle, profane unclean speech.

An Early Journalist.

John filled the office of a journalist. Of the four reporters of the words, acts and character of Jesus, his is the ablest and most intimate character study. A number of notable facts are known concerning this friend of Jesus, who possessed the pen of a ready writer; but the one great fact which obscures all others is that he has bequeathed to the world a record of his supreme knowledge, which was Christ. He is the first of the forthtellers of the best who has transferred to their audit, character and life are his debtors because he joined heart to hand in writing his testimony—concerning history's preeminent character.

The wonder is that more of the minds which have come under the spell of that personality do not take up the pen as a medium of witness-bearing. The man with a passion for interpreting Christ naturally turns to the pulpit as his means of reaching people; yet what an insignificant handful the largest congregation seems alongside of the items of thousands, and even the millions, who may be reached through the printed page. I confess to a feeling of awe and utter unfitness when I contemplate how even this poor prearrangement will be read by busy men of affairs, by gentle "shut-ins," by earnest Christians and by others whom the usual Christian agencies do not reach—in city homes of all kinds, in farmhouses, in mountain cabins, in miners' lodgings, on trains and boats—the territory covered every week stretching from Alaska to Texas, from ocean to ocean. It is no idle prophecy to declare that one of the agencies to be largely employed in the near tomorrow by the increasingly contemporaneous kingdom will be the existing newspaper press.

A Wilderness Prophet.

A certain type of mind will hear no preacher who is not arrayed in canonical vestments; but the great bulk of humanity are willing to be startled into attention by unconventional men and unconventional methods. The world dearly loves an original—after Mrs. Grundy has set her seal of approval on him. The official prophesied forthteller of Jesus was a rough figure from the wilderness, his camel's-hair robe girt by a leather zone. John the Baptist was a man immersed in a mission. Professedly and avowedly, he was only a voice calling attention to the one who was to come.

The nearest to greatness that most of us ever can approach is to support and follow the great. This was John's noble career, to witness to the greater one. All the attention that men would shower upon him, he refused to accept, turning it to that figure to whom he pointed crying, as with kingly self-abnegation he surrendered his own disciples, "Behold, the Lamb of God!" In the train of this wonderful witnesses all can follow, with larger, better selves and cry "Behold!"

The Supporting Friends.

A Pittsburg oyster opener was officially notified the other day that he had fallen heir to a million dollars. Do you suppose that humble oyster saloon will know him much longer? He has now more important duties in life than opening oysters—although a week ago he doubtless counted himself fortunate to have a steady job. The good must be made way for the better. A man who finds great treasure must forsake lesser things.

Thus the little band of twelve intimate friends, who figure in these lessons on the life of the Lord, gave up all else in order that they might follow him. In him they saw the supreme good; to support, serve and follow him thereafter became with them life's chief business. We wonder how they would serve the promised one if they were alive today. Would they all be preachers to enthralling congregations? Or would Matthew be a successful business man earning money to send the good news where he could never carry it himself? Would John write? Would Andrew be a city missionary or a Y. M. C. A. secretary, would Peter be the organizer and leader of some Christian department? Yes, each in his own place and way, would be a forthteller of the world's best—and would be rewarded with the world's best and rain gains.

A Life's Outreach.

A glorious assortment of people are found lined up, in one way or another, to the credit of the man whose career is being studied. Nearly all of these, such was and still is, the peculiar power of Jesus over his friends, became heralds of his helpfulness. It is the fashion of Jesus to make men his witnesses, and thus, inevitably, witnesses for all that is most worth while in life.

Take, for instance, the woman who was that Samaritan woman—wicked and not altogether respectable Samaritan woman, by Jacob's well. Unpromising material she. Yet the touch of Jesus upon her spirit made her an evangelist in her village, and she who had stood for the worst straightway began to stand for the best when there was that other distracted mothers, seeking health for his son—and finding it, along with better things. At noonde became a protagonist of the truth. The sufferer at the pool of Bethesda, and the man born blind, what stout and effective champions of the truth they became, when coming under the healing influence of Jesus. In a trade, cross and selfish fashion, the hungry men whom Christ fed on the hillside likewise bore their testimony to the wonderful one. Nicodemus, called to be true to the best he had learned—and even he, belatedly, came out of reckless and unreserved allegiance to the teacher whom he had discovered to be the promised revealer of God.

Truth's Noblest Knight.

This practical, unfailing, present day theme of utter loyalty to truth, which runs through all the Sabbath school lessons, naturally found its fullest expression in the central figure of this moving biography. Jesus alone lived life at its best. He was a revelation of human possibilities. In his school men learn how to be true and good and forever steadfast.

The motives that sway most of us today—pride, fear, lust for gold, concern for reputation, and all the other mean forms that self-interest wears—he showed men how to subordinate, putting above them all a regnant loyalty to the will of God. Consistently and inspiringly, Jesus lived to please his Father and to serve mankind. He sought no favor from men. He did not fear the face of man. For him life meant one thing supremely—and this principle he reiterates for all men's guidance—an opportunity to live the life of God in the world of man.

THE RICHEST MAN

Terse Comments on the Uniform Prayer-meeting Topic of the Young People's Societies—Christian Endeavor, Baptist Young People's Union, Epworth League, etc.—for March 22 is, "The Wise Use of Influence." Eccl. 4: 9, 10; Prov. 27: 5, 9, 10, 17, 19.

BY WILLIAM T. ELLIS

The greatest wealth is greatest influence. He is richest whose life is most powerfully invested to the largest number of other lives.

Some well meaning folk are diligently engaged in trying to convert themselves into ciphers. They seek to efface their personality, that they may please and serve their fellows. Thereby they commit a cardinal offense against themselves, their fellows and God. For a person must be somebody before he can do anything. Characterless shadows lead nobody anywhere. The Kingdom of Heaven is not to be brought in by smiling, spineless, supine creatures of gelatinous good will. Out upon this morbid conception of unselfishness! God's command is to be strong. His need is for men and women of force as well as friendliness and of strength as well as sweetness.

Even a hitching post, before it can be tied to, must stand.

There is no influence without individuality. The first contribution anybody can make to the well-being of the race, or the glory of God, is to achieve a character for himself. A man must stand before he can lift. How can one impart life who does not possess it? A sensible insistence upon one's own identity must precede all effective service of men for God.

A facile, fatuous amiability is some persons' conception of a Christian character. Hundreds of books and thousands of poems are being written to extol the passive virtues. These have helped beget a type of life which is inoffensive—it even shrinks from offending the devil's sensibilities—but also ineffective. God's empire-builders are robust souls, sturdy, daring, bold. These intrepid pioneers have scant time for morbid introspection; they spend few hours in considering what other persons think of them, or in weighing what the effect of their every word upon some thin-skinned neighbor may be. They have real work to do, and "the king's business requireth haste." They keep their eye upon God, and let men alone. Therefore, since they do not seek influence, with them it does possess it.

Only objects possessing substance cast a shadow. And influence, after all, is only the shadow cast by character. Cultivate character, and let the sun determine the shadow.

"What we really are, somehow or other, will ooze out," tersely and truly says the great Robertson of Brighton.

Paramount concern for our influence begets an unwholesome self-consciousness. It also tends to Pharisaism. If we live for the eyes of men, we come to stand like Hubert, who labors in Hugo's "Angelo," before a mirror, and to be more concerned about our appearance than about our character. On the other hand, if we make sure that our hearts are right with God, we may depend upon him to take care that our lives, but only help comes to others through our lives.

Lord, speak to me that I may speak
In living echoes of thy tone;
As thou hast sought, so let me seek
Thine erring children, lost and lone.

O teach me Lord, that I may teach
The wandering and the wavering feet;
O feed me, Lord, that I may feed
Thy hungering ones with manna sweet.

O strengthen me, that while I stand
Firm on the rock and strong in prayer,
I may stretch out a loving hand
To wrestlers with the troubled sea.

O teach me, Lord, that I may teach
The precious things thou dost impart;
And wing my words, that they may reach
The hidden depth of many a heart.

—Francis Ridley Havergal.

Everybody's life is a talent which he is bound to employ to the full. It is a Christian duty to project one's personality as far as possible. Character is the highest gift with which God has intrusted any one; therefore he is bound to make the highest use of it. A man of humbler attainments, actuated by this spirit, often serves the world more greatly than another man richly endowed with ability. Ten pennies in circulation are of more use to society than 10 gold pieces buried in a cellar. Many a humble person, moved by a sense of stewardship, extends his influences into remote lands and into many spheres of service for others. So wonderful is the machinery of modern life that an ordinary man of ordinary income may be a factor in the religious life of half a dozen countries, a useful citizen in his own neighborhood, an effective force in a local church, a reformer, etc. In the home, a father of many young people, and an exemplary husband and father in his own home.

It takes more than the repetition of his name in the newspaper to make an influential citizen. Some who have achieved this prominence are actually extraordinarily devoid of influence over other men—and influence, of course, is exerted only upon persons.

Every life is a plan of God. But it may also help God with his plans for other lives.

NEWS AND NOTES.

Yale undergraduates, through their Young Men's Christian associations, now maintain a rescue mission in New Haven for "down and outs." It is in charge of a worker from the water street mission, New York, and 20 student helpers.

According to Roman Catholic authorities, there were 13,577,425 members of that church in the United States at the beginning of the present year.

One hundred German pastors have been invited to visit London for a few days next summer as guests of the Metropolitan Free Church federation, of which a Quaker, J. Allen Baker, is president. The mornings of the visit will be devoted to fraternal conferences, the afternoons to sight-seeing and the evenings to mass meetings.

Rev. R. J. Campbell of City Temple, London, proposes to form a new religious organization for the promulgation of the "new theology."

The theological seminary at Bangor, Me., recently held a series of "seminary extension" meetings, attended by ministers and laymen from all over the state, and addressed by men of national prominence, including Dr. Washington Gladden and Dr. Henry van Dyke.

By a recent imperial edict, native Christians in China are more nearly placed on a legal equality with other subjects than heretofore. The Pekin officials have been ordered to put together in pamphlet form, for the guidance of local officials throughout the empire, the articles respecting Christianity in China's treaties with other nations.

An agitation has been started by home missionary workers among immigrants, looking to the placing of matrons on each of the ships carrying steerage passengers, for the protection of the women immigrants.

A unique method of doing philanthropic work, and of educating the workers, has been adopted by a young Bible class in Calvary Baptist church, Albany, N. Y. The class gives to the young people's society in the church a dollar a week for city missionary and philanthropic work, provided only that a different member of the society should each week take that dollar, and himself or herself search out some needy child in the city, and minister to it, and report back to the society how the money had been used.

NINE GIRLS AND ONE MERE MAN IN "THE GINGERBREAD MAN," AT THE OPERA HOUSE NEXT SATURDAY, MARCH 21.

What the Press Agents Say

"THE GINGERBREAD MAN."

Being a tremendous success in New York, Chicago and Philadelphia, and the largest cities in the United States, the monarch of all musical plays, "The Gingerbread Man," will be presented by Nixon & Zimmerman at the Opera House next Saturday.

It is doubtful if there is a production on the road that in point of scenic splendor can compare in any respect with "The Gingerbread Man." Five of the leading scenic artists in the country were engaged for seven months in getting up this production. Nixon & Zimmerman, the Philadelphia managers of "The Gingerbread Man," paid particular attention to the selection of the members of the company. The result is a cast which is superior to any of the musical comedies now traveling in the United States. Margaret Savori, who portrays "Marie," a confectioner's sweet girl, who was transformed by an evil genius into a sugar plum, and respectively into a princess, is famous in two continents for her beauty. Her song, "That Beautiful Land of Bon-Bon," was the song hit of the last musical season in New York city. Others in the cast are Evelyn Frances Kellogg, Mabel Day, Nellie Nice, Fred J. Nice, Garrick Major, Ross Snow, James McElhern, James B. Litcher, Lute Vroh-man, Bert Lovey and a vast concourse of lovingly beautiful show girls and gladsome choristers, making a complete organization of 62 people.

AL. G. FIELD GREATER MINSTRELS

Wherever the Al. G. Field greater minstrels have appeared the critics and the public have admitted that the scene of scenic display is the transformation scene from the minstrel first part to the spectacle appropriately named by Mr. Field as "The Feast of Flowers." The Columbus Daily Review says: "It is one of the most bewildering beautiful stage pictures ever conceived. The scene is laid in a hothouse or conservatory of extensive proportions, trellised throughout with vines and creeping plants, while upon tiers are arranged potted plants and flowering shrubs which are electrically articulated with tiny bulbs of the exact color of the flowers, and which light up the interior of the massive glass house in a flood of varicolored lights, the effulgence of which is reflected through out the theater in a bath of rainbow lights. The minstrels sit among the illumined plants, extra brilliancy being added to the scene by an electric fountain, which casts upward cascades of water of all colors. In the background a softer radiance is effected by cork-screw and colored lights which bring into relief the darker exotics and accentuate the beautiful perspective of the most attractive picture ever presented upon an American stage." The Al. G. Field Greater Minstrels will appear at the Opera House next Monday evening.

"FORTY-FIVE MINUTES FROM BROADWAY"

If it were only possible to secure his rights in the matter, George H. Cohan, who wrote "Forty-five Minutes From Broadway," which Klaw & Erlanger will present at the Opera House, Tuesday, March 24, with Scott Welch in the role of "Kid Burns," the successful author-composer-actor would be entitled to receive from the real estate agents in New York city a small fortune in commissions for property sold through the influence of his play. The scene of the piece is at New Rochelle, just three-quarters of an hour by train from New York city, in short, nothing more or less than a suburb of the metropolis on the Atlantic seaboard. The place was so well advertised during the play's long run in New York that one real estate agent alone who dealt in New Rochelle property, did more business in four months after the New York premier of the Cohan play than he had done for the three years he had been handling the property prior to that time. And he was but one of the several to profit in this remarkable number. Frances Gordon will be seen in the role of "Plain Mary," the servant girl in New Rochelle.

TWO WELL-KNOWN VETERANS.

Two well-known war veterans have died during the past few days. Colonel Henry Lippencott, U. S. A., retired, died in Brooklyn after a long illness. He entered the army as an acting medical cadet in 1863, and during forty years of active service, served in the Civil war and in many campaigns in war and in many campaigns, including those against the Indians in California and Nevada in 1865. Brigadier General Anthony Heger, retired, died in New York of old age. He was born in Austria seventy-nine years ago. General Heger entered the regular army as assistant surgeon in 1855, after having served through the Civil war. At its close he won his brevet as lieutenant colonel for faithful and meritous service. He served through the different grades, and in 1891 he was made colonel and appointed assistant surgeon general. He was retired in 1892, and in 1904 he was advanced to the grade of brigadier general.

There are bits of poetry in my mind learned in infancy which have stood by me—keeping me true to my ideals of duty rather than lose them, I would have missed all the sermons I ever heard.—President Eliot.

The Story of a Medicine.

Its name, "Golden Medical Discovery," was suggested by one of its most important and valuable ingredients—Golden Seal root.

Nearly forty years ago, Dr. Pierce discovered that he could, by the use of pure, triple-refined glycerine, aided by a certain degree of constantly maintained heat and with the aid of apparatus and appliances designed for that purpose, extract from our most valuable native medicinal roots their curative properties much better than by the use of alcohol, so generally employed. So the now world-famed "Golden Medical Discovery," for the cure of weak stomach, indigestion, or dyspepsia, torpid liver, or biliousness and kindred derangements was first made, as it ever since has been, without a particle of alcohol in its make-up.

A glance at the full list of its ingredients, printed on every bottle-wrapper, will show that it is made from the most valuable medicinal roots found growing in our American forests. All these ingredients have received the strongest endorsement from the leading medical authorities, and have been prescribed by them in their practice for the diseases for which Golden Medical Discovery" is claimed to be a cure.

A little book of these endorsements has been compiled by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., and will be mailed free to any one asking same, by postal card or letter addressed to the Doctor as above. From these endorsements, copied from standard medical books of all the different schools of practice, it will be found that the ingredients composing the "Golden Medical Discovery" are advised not only for the cure of the above mentioned diseases, but also for the cure of all catarrhal, bronchial and throat affections, accompanied with catarrhal discharges, hoarseness, sore throat, lingering, or hang-on coughs, and all those wasting affections which, if not promptly and properly treated are liable to terminate in consumption. Take Dr. Pierce's Discovery in time and persevere in its use until you give it a fair trial and it is not likely to disappoint. Too much must not be expected of it. It will not perform miracles. It will not cure consumption in its advanced stages. No medicine will. It will cure the affections that lead up to consumption, if taken in time.

WHAT 50 CENTS WORTH OF ELECTRICITY WILL DO

An interesting engineer has figured up the number of things which can be accomplished with but 50 cents worth of electricity at 10 cents a kilowatt hour. Here are some of them:

Light an ordinary barn or stable with three 16-candle-power lamps one hour every night for 31 nights.

Will a small motor attached to the washing machine and wringer 50 cents worth of electricity will do eight washings.

It will also do two weeks' ironing using a six-pound iron.

An electric fan can be operated three and one-half hours a day for 50 cents.

Two weeks' sewing can be done on the motor-driven sewing machine for the same price.

It will light the porch light (or three hours every night for two months.

Fifty cents will pay for the current consumed in using the electric heating and three hours every night for 30 nights.

It will grind 1,125 pounds of coffee; broil 50 steaks; cook 20 meals in the electric chafing dish; fry 400 eggs.

It will fan the blacksmith's forge blower for a week.

It will hoist 2,000,000 bricks, two stories.

A one-horse-power motor will run seven hours at full load for 50 cents.

Better have failed in the high aim
Than vulgarity in the low aim succeed.

Every Dog Has His Day

Did you ever stop to consider how often the changes in the fortunes of a family mean the changes in the conditions of a dog's life?

Every day some family, through misfortune or for some other reason, is compelled to part with a well-bred dog.

They don't want their dog to be cast about or sold in the market. They want him to be put in a home as good as that which they were able to give him.

The first thought of such people is the classified columns of The Gazette.

If you want to buy a fine dog, where else can you learn what dogs are for sale except in the classified columns of the paper where families are advertising their dogs for sale.

Or perhaps you have lost your dog; he is either a pet, a valuable dog or one you would not part with for any price. One of our little lost ads. will locate him for you, saving you time and anxiety, and at such a nominal expense.

Every day and Sunday The Gazette is the classified medium.
